Google Research

By Elizabeth Hartwick
~ Guest Writer ~

I know, I know. You're out there on Google and you think you're finding what you want. You think everything's good, everything's fine then BAM! There's that damn gorilla with your video you need to return... yesterday!! Not only that, but he stole your cookies and he's going to show them to your boss. Sure, you may think that'd be a great thing because your cookies are legendary. People come from far and wide to sample those dainty delights, but not today. This batch of cookies would make Cheech cry in the illegal glory of it. Your boss will surely not be pleased.

Now, that damnable monkey shoves one of these collected cookies into your mouth and forces you to masticate. You should know right now that you have hit

A Guide to Getting that Puppy in the Window

Nick Nelson ~ Daily Bull

Everyone loves dogs (except for people that hate dogs and kitten-huffing addicts). Dogs are the ruling species on Earth, a fact ignored by most people. If you don't believe me, then why are there laws in place that tell you to pick your dog's crap up off the street or grass? Why do you (or, more likely, your parents) work day in and day out to pay for your dog's health care and food while it stays at home mutilating your belongings through various fanged appendages and excremental orifices? It's obvious truth that dogs are our commanders. Since you undoubtedly crave a dog in your life by now (if you don't already have one), there are some facts you may want to know before you purchase that cute puppy in the window.

If not for kibble, snausages, and beggin' strips, dogs would instantly eat all of our faces. Dogs are at least 10 times smarter than Stephen Hawking and know that killing humans would mean an end to these obscenely overprocessed yet delicious meat-flavored snacks. As long as humans keep making this type of dog currency, we will continue to find a use for the dog, including: maintaining world population by murdering children in their sleep, maintaining cat population (which also effectively lowers kitten-huffing-related accidents, according to government surveys), personal enjoyment for fecalphiliacs and water sports hobbyists, spreading rabies, penis size compensation, keeping the police carpet cleaning businesses in existence, taking all the fun out of blind people, and homework procrastination excuses. Dogs are also occasionally used in bestiality porn, an unsettling, but prominent part of the pornography industry (the coolest industry ever, according to 3 out of 4 Michigan Tech students).

If you've ever taken a science class at Tech with a lab component, then you should be familiar with some of the warning symbols used to caution potential slaves (I mean buyers) about their purchase's dangers. The following are some common symbol labels:

Flammable: dogs with low boiling points

Oxidizing: dogs that react exothermically with other substances

How To...Find God

By Melissa Masucci ~ Daily Bull

The age-old question, asked by the religious and non-religious alike, since the Jews invented monotheism way back when, has always been "How do I find God?" Generally this question is interpreted on a figurative level, and people are instructed on how to find proof of God's existence by means of looking at his/her creations.

It is generally this method that creates Agnostics, the people who want to believe but want better proof than simple sayings like "But look at the stars and how immensely complicated it all is!" can bring. Agnostics want tangible proof of God – and this article is going to bring that to you, by giving you all the tools and ideas you need to go out and find God for yourself.

1. He/she may be hiding in plain sight, so exhaust all elementary searching techniques. What I mean by this is simply: God's probably not under that rock (even the Rock of Gibraltar, folks), or behind that tree, or even in the household of the most Uber-Christian Conservative family in the United States, but look anyway. Go through all of the obvious places that even a six year old playing Hide and Go Seek would know to check, just so you can count them out later on.

2. Be ready to discard whatever existing notions you may have of the nature of God. We don't know what God looks like, so we don't necessarily know him/her as soon as we see them. So be open to the fact that God could come to you in the form of a young adult just out of their angsty teen years, or a ginormous goldfish you've had for like seven years that survived

Explosive: dogs that explode

Toxic: dogs that can cause health complications

Corrosive: dogs that destroy living tissue on contact

Hazardous to the Environment: dogs that present some danger to the environment (especially trees and fish)

You may also want to take into consideration the species of dog you would like to have around. This may include, but is not limited to:

Poodles: dog counterpart to the human bi-curious metrosexual

Huskies: interesting and intelligent, but typically unattractive

Sheep Dog: can entertain itself by trying to herd itself for infinity

Pit Bull: the sweetest of all the dogs, but has an appetite for the gamey meat of human children

Pomeranians: can live off pomegranates until turned into pom-poms

Chihuahuas: a rare breed that can only be found peddling fake Mexican food to Americans or in Paris Hilton's handbags)

Puppies (generic): huge amount of fun until they excrete waste all over your stuff; also good as various makeshift sports equipment

Hopefully you have a fair understanding of dogs by now. Go get one before we run out of treats and the human race ends! 🐾 the automatic loosing sequence, but your heart will be assured as you see the great ape grow and expand. The gorilla now towers above in a purple hue. His newly radioactive aura strikes fear into your heart and you know that this radiation would not make you cool like spider man, but cool like Hirotaka Sozuoki or Chernobyl. Dead cool. Completed cool. Good luck saying goodbye to the wife and kids! That ape has your alpaca and it's sure to rape its STDs like a mofo.

You thought you were looking up Vaporeon, the aquatic Pokemon, but no, you were looking up your own despair, destruction and trauma. Put that little mouse clicker aside and drop that tab and enter key. Think about this long and hard before you do anything rash. How will your loved one react when they see you, cookie in mouth, drooling on the bed, with pictures of porn on the search engine? There are far better ways to die, I'm sure, but that's another article entirely.

I'll get off my soapbox now, but I just want you all to know, I love you. I may never see you, I may never talk to you, I may never wink at you and I may never make sweet, sweet love to you, mmm...but I love you.

Drop the mouse. 🐭

The Only Girl at Tech

By Sarah "Teeze" Amlotte
~ Guest Writer ~

The other day I was talking to a male friend of mine about what it would be like to be the only girl on campus and how it would rock. So, in EC3400 I decided to write the following article about what I would do and not do if this were the case:

- I would stop wearing make up. It is a fact that most girls would not wear make-up if it weren't for other girls. We don't wear it to impress guys, but to impress other females. Therefore, no other girls = no waking up early to cover my face in goop and powder.

- I would demand to join the men's broomball team, because I am badass (not really, I just like to play).

- I would still shave my legs. Some girls would say they wouldn't, but that is just gross.

- All skirts and shorts in my wardrobe would be burned. Who do I have to compete with? Jeans and BDU (cam military issue pants for you civilians) would be my staple.

- I would run for as many organization leadership positions as I could. This would make it easier to control the guys here and teach them how a girl would like to be treated.

- My food bill would greatly decrease, as I would have a date every night of the week.

- I would also get a bodyguard. I may even hire the jui jitsu and karate clubs for this position. Or I would hire my new friends Big Nick and Jarrell because they rock. This of course would be for my own safety, being the only girl on campus and all...

- I wouldn't have to go by nickname. Do any of you know how many Sarah's are on this campus? At least 51 (I just Stalkerneted the name Sara).

All in all, I would enjoy being the only girl on campus. I would never be bored, would always have a study partner and well, have a ton of fun. 🐾 famine, electrocutions and cannibalism. You never know.

3. Be ready to look outside of religion. It is not necessary to go to church or other place of worship to find God. Everyone knows God hangs out more at arcades that have Skee-Ball than at churches, anyway.

4. Look at your local library. God's an intelligent sort – I mean, heck, he/she supposedly created the universe; you'd have to be pretty smart for that. Perhaps one day you'll find God at the library perusing the "Do It Yourself" section.

5. Choose a person of faith. Don't let your previous experience with the "super religious type" scare you away. Perhaps they're like that for a reason – see if they know where God is!

6. Speak to God. If you're not afraid of looking momentarily foolish out in public, walk around yelling his name and "Wussup?'s" to him/her wherever you are. If and when you receive an answer, fantastic! Just be sure to sort out the loonies from the ones that might actually be God.

If all else fails and you've exhausted all of the above ideas, go back to your local library and check out the book "The Idiot's Guide to Creating a Universe" and read the About the Author information inside the back cover. That'll definitely get you somewhere. 🐾
