Noteworthy Things That Happened During Summer Break

By Andrew McInnes ~ Daily Bull

So, here we all find ourselves, once again – or, of course, for the first time – on the lovely campus of Michigan Technological University. For those of us that have been here for a few years, it's at about this time that we start asking ourselves and our fellows just why the hell we came back for another painful semester and approximately one-half of an interminable winter. You Freshpersons, on the other hand, may even now still have merry stars in your eyes as you schlep your way across Tech's badly maintained sidewalks into the various, completely unmaintained buildings. Rest assured, by January you'll be just like the rest of us: pasty white, cynical and utterly fed up with life.

However, the joys that this particular transformational process (from giddy post-

How To: Swoon Drunk Chicks

By David Klemens ~ Daily Bull

Being the first week of school, I figured I should impart some of my wisdom to the incoming freshman. I, as you shall soon learn, I am a vast resource of valuable information. I will continue to pass on my knowledge to the next generation in hopes that it will be fruitful for them. Now without further adieu, "How to Swoon Drunk Chicks."

The first thing you have to do is find a really drunk girl or get one really drunk. Be wary though, there is a limit. Vomiting is a turn-off for most people or at least awkward. Making out with someone that tastes like vomit isn't very pleasant. Remember, liquor "gets you drunk quicker," so aim for hard liquor rather than beer. Also, fruity drunks help mask the taste of alcohol, which is always a plus when getting someone to drink.

Next you have to gain her attention somehow. Have some sort of gimmick. I suggest learning how to make balloon animals or origami. An orange giraffe or an origami rose will do the trick. How many girls have received a bouquet made from a copy of the Daily Bull? Probably none, but I can tell you that if you gave a girl one it would be straight upstairs for you.

Caution. Do not become that "guitar guy". You do not want to become the guy with the cargo shorts, button-down shirt and a baseball hat that always carries around an acoustic guitar. Just because you can sing some Dave Mathews Band or Oasis doesn't mean that people want to hear it. There have been uncountable failed attempts. Only few can pull it off and they're in a league of their own. My hat's off to you, Andrasko.

Remember curiosity is key. All you have to do to "get a girl" is to catch her curiosity. If she thinks to herself, "Hmm, this guy is kinda cute. I wonder if he is available," you're good to go. Even better is when a girl thinks, "Damn. That boy is gorgeous!" as she proceeds to do a double take. Your goal should be to be the forbidden fruit. She knows she shouldn't taste it, but she knows she wants to.

By now you should have her interested and be ready to leave the party. Now all you have to do is get her home. This part also takes skill. You want her to be still be drunk, but not to the point where she is falling down drunk. You don't want to get her home and then have her fall asleep right away do you? Sometimes it's better to wait and have her sober up a bit before you leave. You must also learn what to say and what not to say. You don't want to say something stupid like, "Hey, let's leave this place and go to my bedroom.” Say something along the lines of, “This party is kind of dying down. We should probably head out,” or “I live way on the other side of town and I know I’m to drunk to drive. How close is your place?” Your words are your weapon. If you can’t use your weapon you’re not going to win the war.

Caution. Two things you might want to avoid are taking her to your place and giving out your phone number. If you really want to play it safe you might want to go by the name Alex Dimitrijeski. Why the precautions? There are numerous reasons. For starters she might be a clinger and think you’re dating now. Next, what if she has burning sensations when she urinates or gets cold sores. You don’t want to be responsible for that do you? But most importantly is if she is ugly. Nothing is more embarrassing than having your friends make fun of you when a bulldog comes knocking on the door. 🐕 high school delirium to abject post-MTU depression) are many and varied, and it is not the purpose of this article to spoil all the wonderful new emotions and psychological disorders that you, dear Freshman/Freshwoman, have to look forwards to. Take heart in the fact that everyone around you has either been through the exact same process, is in the process, or is on crystal meth and therefore oblivious to the fifteen feet of snow that will soon inundate the greater Houghton/Hancock metropolitan area.

Follow my advice and you should be golden, but if worse comes to worst, you can always just wait until she passes out.

Moving right along.

It caught this writer’s attention that, over the summer, the celestial body known as Pluto (along with its moon, Charon) has been demoted from its formerly star-spangled and well-known position as “ninth planet in the solar system” to “purposeless dwarf planet in the Kuniper Belt.” Seeing as everyone reading this article, Lord Marshall Editor-in-Chief Sir Dave Klemens, Esq., included, grew up with the well-enforced notion that Pluto was, in fact, a bona fide “ninth planet in the solar system,” it seemed that this sudden, and remarkable, turn of events was worthy of being brought to the attention of the student body of MTU, especially those that are members of the Undergraduate Student Government, since there is some debate whether or not those individuals are able to read grammatically complex sentences with polysyllabic words of ambivalent meaning strewn about within said sentence. The following is an excerpt from the now-infamous press release from the Ministry of Astronomy and Planetary Segregation, regarding the demotion of Pluto from “ninth planet in the solar system.”

“Pluto never was, is not, nor shall be considered or referred to as a planet. We here at the MAPS, from the dawn of the 20th century, have always stated that there are only eight plants in our solar system, no more, no less; there shall be no other debate or opinion upon this matter, as we are the only professionals in this field. Literature that may say anything to the contrary is merely a figment of your imagination, or part of an international terroristical conspiracy to confuse and befuddle the well-meaning citizens of the Earth. Any individual that echoes these claims, or is known to fail to appreciate the gravity of this situation, is also a part of this conspiracy, and should be immediately reported to the proper authorities for resocialisation and re-education. England Prevails!”

An interesting announcement from Public Safety soon followed the MAPS’s statement, and is repeated here as per the original printing in The Lode:

*Attention all students, faculty, and employees of MTU: as per Resolution 3857-Bh3*6 from the Ministry of Astrology and Planetary Segregation, the following new regulations are going to be enforced throughout MTU’s campus. Starting August 28th, any printed material making favorable references to the dwarf planet Pluto as being the ninth planet in the solar system is to be turned into Public Safety’s office for mandatory incineration. Any electronic material making favorable references to the dwarf planet Pluto as being the ninth planet* in the solar system is to be forwarded to Public Safety, where officers will then take appropriate measures to correct the material. Any persons, be they affiliated with MTU in any fashion or not, discovered making favorable references to the dwarf planet Pluto as being the ninth planet in the solar system is [sic] to be immediately reported to Public Safety for mandatory resocialisation and reeducation. Good luck in the coming semester, students, and all hail the Eight Canonical Planets of Our Solar System!

The writer is, as one might think, a little skeptical of the similarities and timings between the two announcements, seeing as the MAPS has no apparent affiliation with MTU in any way, shape, or form. However, that is probably an erroneous viewpoint, for obvious reasons, and it must be made clear that the situation we – the well-informed student body of MTU – find ourselves in is not what it might seem. There is a world-wide plot afoot, to shake the very foundations of science and reality that we all have based our entire lives upon. As the two above announcements should make clear, there are certain people that wish to attack the very cornerstone of our daily perceptions, the very form that our personalities conform to: they wish to make us believe that Pluto is not the ninth planet of our solar system.

We here at the Daily Bull rigorously and vigorously oppose this harmful movement within our society, and we are looking to prevent its continued spread before it’s too late, and our American way of life has been eradicated. We will meet them in every conference room, we will fight over every astronomy book that lists Pluto as the ninth planet, and we shall fight unto the death if need be. Defeat is not an option, for if we of the Daily Bull fall, then all that shall be left will be The Lode, an obvious mouthpiece of this world-wide malignant political movement bent on the elimination of our society, and that, dear Reader, would mean doom for everyone that loves this university and calls this place home, whomever and whatever “everyone” might be.

So, we ask of you, are you with us? Will you stand unflinchingly before the ravening hoard of conformist Anti-Plutites, their minds corrupted by an endless stream of commercial subliminal programming? Can you take carry the banner forwards, even under the threat of utter ruin and ridicule? If you think you’ve got what it takes, come to the Daily Bull meeting on all Wednesdays at 9:15 PM in Walker 205, and join up! Service guarantees Citizenship! 🐕
