Bachelorette Lifestyle

My Home Economics class in middle school totally did not prepare me for life on my own. Who cares if you can bake a cake when you don't know how to wash dishes? Why do I need to know how to sew clothes when I don't know how to wash them? In my time as a college student, I have learned many vital new life skills, most of which I had to learn the hard way.

I have managed to avoid the tragic mistake of washing red towels with new underwear. I do this by purchasing new underwear every week. I get the kind that have the days of the week on them so that I can keep track of

Disguising Police Cars

By Scott Nelson ~ Daily Bull

In the modern age, there are many ways for people to recognize the standard police cruisers. To remedy this, most police departments have discovered new and innovative ways to make sure that their speed traps are successful, I have seen many of these new techniques and I am about to share these various tidbits of knowledge, be prepared to speed down US Hwy 41 to get home for break.

Hidden Police Rednecks:

Sitting on some dirt offshoot of the highway, there is a rusty old pickup truck. Well, this is Michigan, no one thinks twice when you see a crappy rusted old off the road. Little do the unsuspecting speeders know, this unsuspecting truck is actually a cop, with his radar gun trained on you. So, you race by and you see the lights pop out of the grill and then the unmistakable sound of the sirens behind you. It's a wonderful thing, this redneck can give you tickets.

Delivery Vehicles:

Driving down the street next to you is a Domino's Pizza delivery car, on its way to go deliver a piping hot pizza to wherever it belongs. It is going a bit slow, not too slow, but cars are still passing it quite quickly. One car happens to race passed this '95 Blue Toyota Tercel, and immediately the trademark red and blue lights pop out of the rooftop sign to nab the speeder. Not only will this cop give you quite a ticket, but the smell of fresh pizza will also make you quite hungry.

Another way that cops will attempt to trick you is through a large van, with one hell of an engine. These white FBI stakeout style vans will hunt you down and ticket the oblivious sucker that happens to speed by.

Soccer Moms:

While going up a hill, the family minivan is definitely not the best at racing towards its destination, whether it is a soccer game or ballet practice. What if that Dodge Caravan isn't going to some sort of family engagement, but is rather going to the shoulder,

Where's the green wire?	Didn't the Aztecs do this?
Maybe I can just put that back.	Rock-paper-scissors-shoot!
Where's my whiskey?	5-second rule!
Has anyone seen my watch?	These shnozberries taste like shnozberries.
Let me check Wikipedia.	I wonder if we can sell this on Ebay.
Holy shit! Killer bees!	She has really nice boobs.
I got my degree from NMU.	Excuse me, are you single?
Hold my beer.	Watch me pull this rabbit out of his chest!
Is that the funnybone? Ha-ha.	I wish I didn't have Parkinsons.
I found Waldo.	Damn it, I just lost.
Whoa, get my camera!	He's passed out; let's shave him.

behind your speeding tail. Don't be fooled by these lumbering behemoths. They pack a punch and whenever they get on your ass, there is no hope of escaping this engine.

Airplanes:

Whilst travelling through the plane states, one might notice large yellow hash marks evenly spaced along the road. These hash marks are definitely not the result of the road painter's all night drinking binge with the Civil Engineers the night prior, but rather a tool for the police to use airplanes to clock speeders from the air. These planes will radio your speed to awaiting patrol cars. Personally, I would really like to see a police owned plane take out a car in "North by Northwest" Fashion, with machine guns and a chase through a cornfield.

High-Speed Log Trucks:

Everyday, a log truck rolls through Houghton unnoticed. However, no one would suspect that is normal occurrence could actually be yet another cop in disguise waiting to give you another ticket. Though, if one of these trucks starts a high-speed pursuit of you, be careful because all of those logs creates quite a lot of inertia. I hope you passed PH2100, because that means that if you stop too quickly, you won't know what hit you.

As you head back from Michigan Tech, remember that nothing is as it seems. The only sure-fire way to avoid yet another ticket is to use some poor bastard ahead of you as cop bait. Happy Trails! ☺ my schedule. I must say, however, that I do respect those people with enough laundry power to wash their own, even if it does turn out pink. It is the true man who has both the confidence to wash his own underwear, and wear the pink underwear as well.

Dishes are also entirely overrated. I have learned to employ the Coffee Mug Method of eating. Cereal in the morning is placed in the coffee mug and consumed. Liquids of various types and alcohol percentages are poured and drained. Lunches of Ramen are prepared in the mug. Dinners of EasyMac are similarly made. (It is important to remember to have EasyMac for dinner and not lunch, so that your dinner doesn't taste like cheese residue. If you can call it cheese.) and ice cream for dessert. Think of it – an entire days worth of nutritious deliciousness, using only one coffee mug and perhaps a spoon. Saves me a whole ton of dish time.

In my life on my own, I was also enlightened about the whereabouts of the Toilet Paper Fairy. It seems to me that, while I lived at home, there was never any shortage of the stuff. Toilet paper sprung from the roll like a white Niagara Falls. Unfortunately, I have discovered that the Toilet Paper Fairy, Santa Claus, and the Easter Bunny all ended up being the same person – my mother. And of the three, I miss the Toilet Paper Fairy the most. I now have to keep track of how much I have, and if I run out it's entirely my own fault. Unfortunately, nothing else works quite as well as toilet paper for that purpose.

Adjusting to life in college is difficult. I'm growing up and learning to take care of myself, but it's not always the most enjoyable experience. I guess we all have to grow older someday. ☺
