The Truth About Kittens

By Nick Nelson ~ Daily Bull

I did a little research on kittens since I don't believe they are really the furry bundles of joy everyone claims, and the truths I found are so awesome that there is no time for an introduction.

Humans have always seen kittens as vile and abusive dictators, meowing to seduce their human pets into a calmed mind control state which automatically causes the victim to imitate an elderly person for the duration of the trance. However, on June 2, 385506606 B.C, the Human versus Kitten War began. After humans had nearly wiped out monkeys, kittens rose to challenge humans for control of the world. God promised that if one side masturbated, he would cause mass deaths on the other side. As a result, both sides violently masturbated. Unfortunately, during the war, friction burns were

Hallucinations Improve Mental Health

By Nick Nelson ~ Daily Bull

Everyone feels overwhelmed every once in awhile. It's not always a bad thing, but it certainly doesn't make our lives easier. I'll use myself as an example. Sixteen credits aren't hard to handle if you can manage yourself well. It's when you throw on involvement with several organizations, a 5-page essay to write, a 250-page book to read (about a tree, no less), a couple exams, and an early-morning radio show that really make you want to poke your eyes out. I am, of course, perpetually slipping slowly into insanity. But on Monday, I discovered something that may help to hinder the downward spiral: hallucinations. You don't necessarily have to be on some sort of drug to have hallucinations; you just have to be open to their occurrence.

If you're interested in testing this theory, then you need to compose yourself correctly beforehand. A good place to practice is here on campus. Just head outdoors during common class hours and clear your mind of all thoughts. Let your auditory sense be your primary guide (but keep your eyes open, too - otherwise, you're just stupid). Let every sound pass through your being. Don't try to pick up individual voices or environmental sounds. The same goes for vision - be visually aware of your surroundings, but don't focus on any specific object or person. Then, begin to wander. With any luck, if your mindset is right and your senses are in order, your mind will start to make awkward connections. If you're having difficulties, try again when you're lacking sleep; it's much easier when you're tired. If necessary, you can use a drug, but I'm not endorsing it.

The following is a basic checklist you can use to see if you're preparing yourself correctly for hallucinations:

- Occasional, slight dizziness
- Music is created out of the sounds going through your head
- Frequent sightings of one of your favorite animals
- Frequent sightings of animal cannibalism
- CS majors become invisible
- A vague falling (or similar) sensation is experienced
- Stationary objects begin to move or speak
- Colors begin to change
- Purple trees everywhere...

When you snap back to reality, you'll feel a whole lot better, especially more relaxed, and you'll probably have a creepy little smile on your face, too (that's okay, at least you feel comfortable). You'll

Random Thoughts

By Nick Nelson ~ Daily Bull

When the sun rose the next morning, the cantaloupe was gone from my dreams.

A local man was found burned at the stake. No word yet if the price of barbeque sauce will be affected.

I can tell if a steak is from France just by looking at it.

Yesterday, I saw my first red porpoise.

Horses make terrible people.

The moon makes a moon sound.

Every image of a tree should be multimodal.

An angry beaver is false advertisement.

It happens all the time. You should look out the window more often.

My favorite type of sand is composed of 73% silicon dioxide, 26% music, and 1% soylent green.

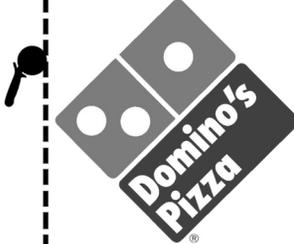

The "Random Thoughts" section is really hard to write when you aren't on mind-expanding drugs.

I get my daily servings of vegetables by eating vegetarians.

The pewter school bus is for antelopes only.

High-fives should never be administered over the Internet.

probably reminisce about how absurd your journey was, at least for a short while. But then you'll probably realize that you've just procrastinated too long and your essay is due in two hours, and you'll turn emo and everyone will hate you.

Just kidding, believe in Jesus! ☹ common. During this time, kittens invented circumcision in an attempt to hinder human masturbation, but this new method did not work on Jews and women. Thanks to the numerous girls' slumber parties, humans have managed to hold their own in the war since then.

In 1904, the Germans finally classified kittens as parasites after witnessing them exit a host cat's vagina after they had outgrown the viscera of the host.

It has also been proven in recent experiments that if a kitten catches you sneaking up on it, it will kick your ass. Contrary to the popular belief, kittens cannot see in the dark. Satan recognized them as the most evil living thing after him in 1986 and granted them the ability to "know where you are." Only a few years ago, kittens were credited with the creation of lemonade, a natural kitten steroid.

Do not be distraught, though, as there are kittens that are nonviolent. These varieties of kittens are all categorized under the term soulless kittens. Soulless kittens have a shelf life of up to 20 years, depending on how well you care for them. The best place to store your kitten is in a cool, dimly lit, monster-free place. It is also recommended to paint your kitten with a water-based paint frequently to help it grow. Kittens are known to produce gravy from its third bladder, which can be bottled and sold at farmers' markets. (Please consult with a kitten farmer before attempting to extract the gravy from your kitten.)

With good care, your kitten will grow into something similar to a lion, though rare cases have been reported of a kitten transforming into a badger. Scientists have proven that, once your kitten has transformed into a larger cat, its insides turn into candy and bars of gold and its liver can be purified into a Philosopher's Stone which can cure all diseases and make you immortal. Don't cut open your cat though, or you're just a sick pervert.

A recent phenomenon, kitten huffing has been increasing in popularity as a relatively safe alternative to drugs, but experts caution to avoid frequent kitten huffing as it is the primary cause of kitten-related human fatalities after kitten masturbation. The procedure to huff a kitten is as follows:

- Obtain a fresh kitten.
 - Cup your hands around the kitten's head, leaving a small opening.
 - Inhale through the opening until you have completely devoured the kitten's soul.
 - Recycle the kitten at your local Kitten Recycling Center or PETA office.
- However, kitten huffing is not intended for children under 12 or Catholics, as the Pope deemed it a mortal sin in 1649.
