The Day the FAA Let Me Down

By Nathan Miller ~ Daily Bull

The FAA let me down guys. I was flying to Colorado for a nice ski trip due to the lack of snow everywhere else, and the FAA lost my luggage. Seven out of nine of our family's bags, to be precise. We were thoroughly disappointed, especially me, because how am I supposed to impress the sweet girls everywhere if I wear the same pair of clothes multiple days in a row? Denver, Denmark, they're almost the same, so I can understand why they might have been confused. We eventually got our bags back two days later, but this experience highlighted one key problem: The FAA cares more about terrorism than my bag.

Due to their obsession with trying to prevent terrorism, the FAA and all the airlines are falling behind on the so-called baggage satisfaction effect. As more and more attention is devoted to making us feel safer by taking away our nail

The Prophet

By Nathan Miller ~ Daily Bull

"Oh, oh, people of the Earth, 'Listen to the warning,' the prophet he said, For soon the cold of night will fall, Summoned by your own hand!"

Sure, Queen's Prophet Song is great, but how many people have actually seen or been near a real Prophet? Prophet's these days are the thing of stories and video games. Thought to have been extinct for thousands of years, most people had given up hope of ever seeing a Prophet again. That is, until I happened to find one.

No, this isn't a Photo-shopped image. This is a real-life Prophet, in the flesh, strutting his stuff on his lonely street corner. Little did everyone know, the Prophets have been hiding in the hills of Colorado this whole time, coming out every afternoon for a short time to recharge their preaching powers. The fact that only a handful of employees at a local ski shop knew of their existence shows how well the Prophets had managed to cover up their existence.

Would you touch this man?

I couldn't believe my eyes the first time I saw him as we drove by. I was like, "Dude, it's a Prophet!" It was too good to be true. How could a Prophet still be alive? Blasphemous. My sighting was confirmed the next day, when on the very same spot he was prancing around, waving his cross and attempting to prophesize any unfortunate passersby who stepped too close. I had to document my find. I prayed to the Flying Spaghetti Monster that the Prophet would still be there the next day.

Lo and behold, he was there, this time majestically waving an American flag around (or as majestic as a guy wearing linens and a priest gown can) and step-stepping with his cross. We made a pass through the light and came around to get close enough for a good shot. I popped down the window and grabbed my camera to take a picture, but he was already ready with a great pose. I took a few shots and then we were gone. Amazing. I couldn't help but remember his humming the entire time, even when he was smiling and posing.

...The Prophet from front

After showing the pictures to my Dad, we decided to strike the next day and try to talk to him. We gathered as much information as we could from the locals. Turns out people call him Brother Nate, and he's been there for quite some time. Rumor has it he's rich, which is fairly plausible considering he can spend his whole afternoon dancing around being absolutely unproductive. No one had actually personally talked to him, and all information was acquired 'from a friend of a friend,' leading me to believe he might be one of those town crazies that everyone avoids.

The day had come where we would confront this elusive Prophet once and for all. Coming back from skiing we took a video (stop by my room and I might show you the secret footage) of him dancing around on our way back to the condo. As soon as we arrived we dumped our equipment and went to drive back into town to talk to him, but no! He was gone. Somehow within ten minutes he had disappeared. I was crushed.

It seems that the Prophets are still alive and well, just hidden away out of the public eye. I wish I could have spent more time with this blessed hero, yet I am glad I didn't harm him so that he may be able to propagate his people further. Maybe far into the future if I return, I may catch a glimpse of the Prophet again. I look forward to the moment I might be able to be the first to communicate with these people for millennia. ☘ clippers and machetes, they completely put off delivering our luggage. It's like an afterthought for them now. "Hmmm, do we have time to load the plane with all the luggage we've spent so much time searching through?" they probably say to themselves. "Nah, let's leave it 'til next flight. Besides, we should probably double check Nathan Miller's bag again. A bomb might have grown in there since last time we checked. You never know."

...FAA from front

Not only do they torture us with lost luggage and full body searches, they go and take away our drinks and liquids. What a joke. The terrorists they did catch were going to make a Gatorade bomb were in their house, not in security. As a result, millions of good, innocent people like myself have our drinks taken away for fear they may spontaneously explode. Last time I checked, a Nalgene full of water wasn't much of a threat. But still they persist. What you can do though is buy the jacked up priced drinks they sell past security. Any food or drink past this point is considered 'sterile,' meaning you can't get pregnant from it. What a relief.

Unfortunately, none of these shops happen to sell energy drinks. On early flights such as mine, an energy drink can mean the difference between life and death. We all know how hard it is to wake up at 4 a.m. with three hours of sleep and try and stay up all day and not fall asleep. It's tough. I can't even take a nap, because I don't want to miss my flight or end up drooling all over the guy next to me on the plane.

So after we finally made it out of the airport, we got to our condo. Looked like something out of the eighties, and the mattresses felt like they had been the host of thousands of couples over the decades. They'd had better days, but I was tired and it didn't really matter. This got me wondering; with all the mattress sales going on at every mattress shop around our entire mattress nation, it should be relatively cheap and easy to get a new mattress now and then. I always wonder how many people actually fall for these mattress sales that go on every day of the year. I know if I did, I'd probably have to run myself over. I don't even know how mattress shops stay in business. How often do people actually replace their mattresses anyways? As I saw in our condo, not very often. I guess they probably stay in business through the few people who think they are going to get a good deal by buying a mattress during a sale. I bet mattresses only cost like 20 bucks, but they sell them for hundreds of dollars. Mattress sales are just a trick to get the uneducated masses to go buy "quality name-brand mattresses at blowout 50% off prices!!"

So, in conclusion, mattress sales and the FAA only exist to benefit from the misfortune of others. Like two peas in a pod, these two necessary evils will continue hounding us for the rest of our days, and quite possibly into the afterlife. Fear for your life friends. ☘

One Year Closer to Victory

By Nathan Miller ~ Daily Bull

2007 is here, and while many people were busy making their new year's resolutions, I was busy doing other things. Busy planning phase three of my World Domination scheme.

As many of you now know, it was revealed just before break that I, Nathan Miller, was planning on taking over the world. One of my own secret Bond agents, Andrew Spina, managed to break through my brainwashing and caught on to what I was doing. I trained him well. I'm glad he managed to grab one of the few 'Super Bond' positions I opened up. He'll do good infiltrating the Australian government.

"When I first met Nathan, I knew he was up to something," said Natalie Helms, local Super Bond candidate. "I never would have guessed he was a future world dominator until he came to me asking if I'd like to help take down Canada with him."

After the governments of the world have been thoroughly distracted by my attractive Bond infiltrators, I will initiate phase three. Although I'm not at the liberty of divulge any key secrets for fear of being sent to Guantanamo, or at the very least forced to give up my the secret locations of my mind control facilities, I will divulge a few clues so as to scare more people to my cause.

Coupled with the decapitation of the world powers and constant bombardment by my effective propaganda, I believe the third step would logically be to mind control everyone to do my bidding. That way, those poor souls who are unaffected by the first two phases will have no choice but submit to my power. In addition, any fool who tries to resist will be easily defeated by the millions of people under my control. The mind control technology has been stolen from the inner walls of the Pentagon, where everything the government has been wasting tens of millions of dollars per day on is hidden.

"I think that Nathan's plans for world domination are completely foolproof," claims Kurt Terhune, head officer at the First United Midwest Mind Controllers Union of the Midwest. "I can't think of anyone better suited for taking over the planet. I wasn't even told to say that, I thought of that all by myself!"

While it may come as a surprise to some, my schemes for becoming a world leader have been growing since I was a young child. I was never satisfied with all the divisions between nations, and decided that the globe would be better off as one color instead of green, red, orange, yellow, blue, and purple. Times were simpler back then, but I still think it would be pretty sweet for all the land to be the same color. You know, like Sherwin Williams tried to do.

Lastly, I'd just like to thank everyone for not taking seriously the dire consequences that will rain down upon you if you don't at least give an effort to be a Super Bond. Sure, I'll probably reject you, but at least you'll be on my list of people that would be good as "Replacement Bureaucratizers" when I clean house. The less of you knocking on my door means I have more time to make propaganda, so get out there and distract me. Beats being a second-class snow grunt, right? ☘
