Staying Warm in Houghton

By Scott Nelson ~ Daily Bull

During the middle of winter here in Houghton, it is sometimes hard to remember what it feels like to stay warm with the snow piled high and the wind chill lower than NMU girl's pants. Well, there are various ways to stay warm and I hope that everyone puts them to good use this next week.

Having Sex:

While having sex, a person can burn up to 2000 calories for 15 minutes of good hot sexual intercourse. The burning of calories gives out a nifty bi-product, which is heat and lots of it. A lot of other factors can play into how many calories you can actually burn, but I won't get into too many details, however, the more problems a couple might have "getting it on" will result in more calories burned. It's that simple, though since we are at Michigan Tech, the real trick is to find a partner to warm yourself with, then again masturbation alone will burn 15 calories after 5 min-

Fashion Trends at Michigan Tech

By Yusuke Hasegawa ~ Daily Bull

Scrumptiously posh and sensibly chic, MTU is the Fashion Capital of the Upper Peninsula. Here is a compilation of all the fashion trends to look for in this fabulously hip town for Spring Semester 2007.

Scholar

Hoodie with school letters from University Images by MTU or with a stupid joke from the outlet store by Steve & Barrys. Grey sweatpants and jogging shoes. Oversized backpack full of expensive textbooks. Always remember to wear your iPod earbuds and play "Candy Coated Sugar Sex" by KAILA YU loud enough that it disrupts the lecture. Make sure your ring tone is just as loud.

Accessories: Backpack, Flip Cell phone, badly formatted MySpace or Facebook page, and a red plastic cup.
Tip: Wear a fake wedding band to ward off psychos.

Yooper

Bright orange fishing hat with strap and a matching vest, button up flannel shirt with the sleeves pulled back for extra character. Detail along the mutton chops and down the beard for a touch of class. Brown baggy pants with red suspenders to ward off the cold. This look just screams "ass end of the world and proud of it". Too bad rifles and shotguns are banned on campus.

Accessories: Pasties, Rifles, Antler Hats, Smoked Fish and Jerky.
Tip: Pasties are disgusting.

Science Professor

Long sleeve dress shirt in either pastel pink or blue. Blue jeans that are a little too tight for public to accentuate the flatness of the butt, and a belt to match the sneakers for the day. Gelled or meticulously combed short hair and shaven beard and mustache. This is perfect for an evening meet of the local high school chess club.

Accessories: Matching color >iClicker, Yard stick, Braces, Pushcart with various physics demonstrations and glasses that are bigger than your face and a big bold black frame.
Tip: Round-toed suede sneakers are perfect for the super fantastic working professor who must spend many hours standing and giving lectures.

Lone Ranger

Trench coat and Rapestache. Combat boots to fight off the authorities and shades from Chanel for some hot fun in the summertime. Childs-blood red for the nails, and tears-of-confusion-and-shame lip gloss to complete the look. Add children as you see fit.

Accessories: BRATZ doll, Candy Bars and a Sociology Textbook.

Tip: You can stretch a child to fit in a smaller size.

I.T. Professional

A XXXL T-shirt to flatter your figure. Get it in a go-with-everything neutral like ivory, gray or black from the online shop by Penny Arcade. Mountain Dew and Pizza Sauce for color, and a neck-beard to match. Jean shorts that don't quite make it to your knees and extra high white cotton socks to cover the rest of your leg. This look is sensible and not too slutty, perfect everyday wear; in fact wear the same shirt to every lecture. Try a button down Hawaiian shirt for special occasions.

Accessories: A flavor of Linux that compliments your Naruto headband, Hamster Cage fragrance to leave a lasting impression.

Tip: Try double-stick tape to get your shirt to stay the way you want it.

Dungeon Master

A cloak to set the tone of professionalism and credibility. Get your wizard staff enchanted with intellect for a hip blue-over-black glow. Try volumising and soft gentle curls for your hair, and hissing when you talk to complete the look. Shine your Elven-skin boots and hunch over so nobody can see your face. This outfit will score big points at your next LUG meeting or H.A.R.O. convention.

Accessories: Batwings, cardboard sword, and a burning hatred against all mankind.

Tip: Kill your friends and then yourself.

...and there you have it, the hottest fashion trends of MTU Spring semester 2007. There's just enough time to get an outfit together to wow all your friends at this year's Winter Carnival. 🧙

utes. It's your choice how you want to keep warm.

Lots of Alcohol:

The addition of alcohol will wreak havoc on your nervous system, as most people know. Biologically speaking, it will prompt your pituitary gland to release a wave of endorphins, which act a natural painkiller, and a compound is inhibited that enhances any nerve signal that happens to be sent. Needless to say, you're not going to be feeling much of anything, especially cold. So, you're not really getting that warm, you're just fooling your body to tell you that you're not cold. Seems to work well, so keep on drinking, responsibly of course.

Getting Fat:

Many new freshmen wonder why MTU Dining Services has created a diet surrounding lots of starches and fats for everyone in the dorms. The reason for this is the fact that the addition of fat to the torso of a human greatly increases our ability to insulate our vital organs. Now, getting fatter is not going to help keep you warm from high winds rushing up against your skin, but you should probably wear a coat if you're outside.

Wearing Season Appropriate Clothes:

Earlier in the semester, I was walking across campus, bundled up and fairly comfortable in the cold with gloves, a knit hat and my favourite wool coat, on my way to class, I ran into a friend who complained to me that they were really, really cold. Well, the reason why he was cold was quite obvious; he was wearing khaki shorts and a T-shirt. I know that some guys like to dress like this because it proves their manly nature, and allows them to impress women by showing them that they're tough. Well, wearing a coat and pants isn't going to decrease the size of your penis, nor will it cause you to grow breasts and start to become obsessed over "Grey's Anatomy," so don't be stupid and wear a coat.

So, right now it is -16°F with a -30°F wind chill and I seriously hope there is no one crazy enough to go outside without Arctic gear on. Unfortunately, most of us don't own Arctic gear, so stay inside and get drunk and have lots of sex, that's why we came to Houghton in the first place; studying is good too. Have a good winter! 🧙

The Propaganda Bowl

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller
~ Daily Bull ~

Sunday marked an important point in my life: it was the first time since 2006 that I watched the Super Bowl just for the commercials. On this historic day I looked on in awe as millions of Americans were seduced by clever advertising and propaganda campaigns. Do you know why you are now more inclined to have a Bud or sign up for Nationwide? Probably not. That's what I'm here for.

Magic: Coca Cola really got into the spirit of things this year and had a good show of phantasmagorical commercials. These featured little creatures that made your coke inside the vending machine. No doubt this was extremely popular with little kids and all the WoW players who were trying to identify which monsters were which.

Sex: Go Daddy really was a let down this year. Not only did they not focus on the Go Daddy girl for more than 5 seconds, they had a midget distracting you from what really mattered: BOOOOOBS. Adding to this was the Doritos chip lady, who would not shut up with those rotten flavor innuendoes. Sex sells, but only when you use Jessica Simpson or someone as equally flattering (very few of them up here, so don't be scared if you can't find them).

Cute Little Animals: Aww, that little dog just wants to ride on the cart like all the other cool animals, but they don't let him. You know what else that little dog wants? He wants you to buy a bunch of Budweiser. It's a giant conspiracy among the woodland creatures that they must sell us beer or other goods that only talking animals can con us into buying.

Violence: Who doesn't like to imagine what happens next when an axe-wielding psychopath AND a chainsaw maniac hop in the car with two unsuspecting victims? The anticipation of knowing what might happen next makes me want to slap my friend in the face its so genius.

Cars: Nice vehicles always make things better. For instance, when you think of the American Chopper dudes and their crazy motorcycles, what are you compelled to buy? Exactly, an HP computer.

Subliminal messaging I tell you.

Celebrities: Having someone rich and famous that you can waste even more money on for your 30 second spot always works. Course, Nationwide did just fine with some deadbeat that we like to call K-Fed. Even though he is completely useless, he still got the job done.

Humor: What did nearly every commercial have in common? Humor. Humor is the ultimate attention getter when you are sitting around watching the refs checking to see if his foot touched or what have you. Hell, that's how the Daily Bull stays in business. As a matter of fact, if it weren't for the Daily Bull, more of you would be asleep and not paying attention in class. If you don't pay attention, you won't get good grades and will probably fail. When people fail and drop out, MTU doesn't get any more money, and should enough people drop out, MTU will go into bankruptcy and be converted into a lumberyard. So next time you pass up reading the Daily Bull, consider this: reading that issue could mean the difference between a good education or a career in the fast food industry. MTU depends on us to keep them in business, so it's a win-win situation when you read it. And that's not propoganda; it's the truth. 🧙
