ChuBACabras Defeated!

By Jake Appold ~ Daily Bull

On a recent Sunday, a broomball game was played where the ChuBACabras faced the Pioneers. This saboth would not be kept holy as blood would be shed. Tensions were high. The game began with a goal to the Pioneers and soon after, a goal to Zach Sponhauer of the ChuBACabras. The Pioneers then took the lead with a steroid driven shot. A lead witch was not held for long when savior Sponhauer tied the game with a shot that can only be described as "divine intervention". The teams exchanged goals once again with Sponhauer achieving the ultimate, a hat trick.

With the end of regulation time, the ChuBACabras needed something to ensure there win in overtime.

Awesome Animal Facts #2

By Nick Nelson ~ Daily Bull

Here's some more fun stuff to know about your favorite animals.

The origin of badgers is largely unknown, but the most widely accepted belief is that they evolved from a species of cat that is known to exist only on the sun. Initially, badgers were few and far between, as they were not able to adapt efficiently and many were killed off by their top predators – koalas and snails. After some time, badgers discovered how to fire .50 caliber bullets from snakes, giving them protection and allowing their population to grow. At their peak, badgers had built many massive cities around the world. Unfortunately, in 2105, the space-time continuum ruptured for 11.5 minutes in Nova Scotia, causing a vast majority of badgers to implode. The only known badger city in existence today is Toronto. Most badgers existing today can be found in the nightclubs of Tampere City cultivating iTrees to harvest iPods. Be warned, though, as badgers may attack without warning and have an innate ability to tear through a person's skin without ripping their clothes.

Little is known of the eel, but one fact that holds true is that eels first appeared on Earth through a Me-phistophelian rift in a Milwaukee elementary school in 1750. The most famous eel, Abraham Lincoln, accidentally freed the slaves when he actually meant to reduce the cost of slaves to zero. Today, the only place one can go for a chance to spot an eel is the back alleys of New York City, Milwaukee, or San Francisco. An eel's favorite activity – shouting at imaginary kittens – is a good way to identify it (or, on rare occasions, one may spot an eel in Chinatown purchasing elephant sedatives).

Manbearpig is real! I'm totally cereal!

Foxes are a mysterious race of annoying huskies that primarily inhabit Australia and Japan. Not much is known of their survival methods, though they have an extraordinary ability to become half fox and half something else. Upon reaching maturity in Japan (age 8), many foxes become half fox and half when-did-chicks-start-growing-breasts-that-early women. Several Australian fox sects become half fox and half orangutan. There are a few famous foxes, including Fox McCloud, a powerful space fox that is half fox and half cloud. George W. Bush has a clever pet fox that is half fox and half fox.

Most people today are not fond of pigeons, as they are typically associated with defecating on every square nanometer of your personal property. However, a secret government program has been uncovered in which pigeons are being trained in war tactics, given that they can carry their own weight in radioactive explosives, anthrax, or smallpox. Pigeons are most commonly found at Republican conventions.

The breadfish spawned into existence due to a surplus of potassium in the universe through the union of Uranus and a fish sandwich. Breadfish are viciously predatory, but are very careful not to damage their victims' spleens. The breadfish is the only real animal in this installment of Awesome Animal Facts.

There would normally be a conclusion here, but I don't feel like thinking that hard. ☹

...ChuBacabras from front

They came to an anonymous decision to pray to The Great BA! Of the Sky. An act so sacred, it can only be performed a certain number of times every year, in the BA! Calendar of course. Then they proceeded to do some sort of sacred dance also. There was chanting in tongues, beer, and well... you had to be there I guess. The ChuBacabras were ready. The Pioneers, on the other hand, were no where in site.

As the official blew the whistle for the extra period, the Pioneers were seen spilling out of a minivan that one of there moms had driven to the game. A "Broomball Mom" if you will. They were all finishing there juice boxes and string cheese as they made there way to the rink.

The extra period was at a standstill. Both teams seemed even. The BA!s had no fear, for there leader would not let them down. After some time, The Great BA! made its decision. Golden Boy, Mike Maksimchuck took the ball on a breakaway path down the ice. He wound up for the shot, swung, and missed as he fell on the ice. A Pioneer teammate then took the ball down the ice and scored the winning goal as the ChuBacabras stood in disbelief.

I had a chance to talk with the ChuBacabras after the game. They were seemed down about there loss. "My penis is too big," says Mike Maksimchuk, when asked about his flop. "It gets in the way all the time. Its like I got a Pringles can danglin' around down there."

"I'm used to blocking normal human shots. Not these crazy, steroid induced ones." says ChuBacabra goalie Brandon Maurisak.

This game goes to show that the good guys don't always win. To all you broomball teams out there that haven't won a game yet I say "Fear not, for your time will come... maybe. Unless it's against a BA! ☹
