Lost Dog Eaten by Lost Boy

By Nathan Miller ~ Daily Bull

Omelet du Fromage, a Beagle from the loving home of the McCurdy family, was finally found today inside the stomach of nine year old Sage Hahn. How he got there remains a mystery, and medical examiners are questioning young Sage for any possible clues linking him to the dog's disappearance.

Both Sage and Omelet du Fromage became lost when they were separated from their owners while playing at the park. Believed to have run away after catapulting himself from a swing, Sage ducked into some bushes where he may never have been seen again.

"I was so distraught, I felt like someone had stabbed me and knocked me out," said Sage's babysitter Hope Morely, who remembers nothing and later was treated for stab wounds and a concussion. "I really hoped he wasn't in the hands of some pedophile. Then people would know it was me who lost him when they see pictures of him on the Internet."

Optimization of Everyday Interactions

By Yusuke Hasegawa ~ Daily Bull

Time Waster Optimization is the process of tuning the output of an annoyance to minimize some attribute or maximize the efficiency of an everyday occurrence.

Lecture Based Situation (student):

If you mumble something stupid and the professor responds "Huh?" because your comment had nothing to do with the lecture, or you mumble something stupid and the professor responds "Huh?" because he couldn't hear you. If you repeat everything you said and end it with "...Never mind. It was a stupid joke anyway" and professor still can't hear you. At least 3 people groan when you open your mouth.

Optimization:

By keeping your mouth shut, you can avoid this pointless interaction. Since nothing was gained during the original process, the end result is the same. Punch yourself in the mouth to save everyone else the trouble of doing it for you.

Lecture Based Situation (professor):

Nobody pays attention to your lecture because they are boring so you try and rip a phonebook to get everyone's attention. It takes you two tries, and you still fail. You try it again the next lecture because it's just that awesome.

Optimization:

By dropping your pants in front of the camera projector, you can enthrall the audience and earn the respect of every guy in the lecture hall. As a side effect some girls may start crying. A few girls will faint and the slackers in the back will have a spiritual journey.

Functional Language Situations:

Speaking with a thick foreign accent about a subject with very similar sounding words. Curving the mid-term because you know nobody learned from your lectures. You give an essay writing assignment in an Electrical Engineering course and act like you understand enough English to critique anything that's not in your native language.

Optimization:

Instead of reading straight from lecture slides, pull the trigger on a blow horn. Give everyone in the class a C. Give an A to that one guy that laughed at your lame jokes.

Social Flow Situations:

Reference a joke that was made 6 months ago every time you're at a party. Nobody finds it funny anymore except for your friends who are just as boring and can't think of anything new to say. You wear Dragon Ball Z shirts everyday.

Optimization:

Stay home and grind levels on your Night-Elf Hunter. Tell the joke in guild chat, at least they can mute you over the Internet.

Party Situation:

You go around telling people "I'm so drunk right now, I'll make out with my friend for 5 dollars and some jell-o shots! Hee hee".

Nothing wakes me up in the morning like a big whiff of Pine-Sol (the orange kind).

...Optimization from front

You're not sure if you're throwing up in the morning because you're anorexic from your poor self-image, pregnant from the random guys you went home to "just chill" with, or still too drunk from last night.

Optimization:

Show up with a neon slut sign on your forehead and don't bother wearing any pants. Take two Nyquil and find a men's bathroom to pass out in. Get some Clearasil for the pimples infesting your face.

I-Have-No-Redeeming-Qualities,-but-my-Parents-Are-Rich Situations:

Buying her a bunch of gifts and driving her around only to be turned down because "You're too clingy". You bought a PS3 thinking it would be worth $700.00. Your major ends with "... with Technology". You tell everyone, "I slept with her," when you just cuddled.

Optimization:

Hand over your car keys and credit card information when you meet her. Surrender your balls to the police and start begging people for money.

By applying these Optimizations in your everyday life, you can save time and energy that would've been otherwise wasted. 🐾

...Lost Dog from front

Omelet du Fromage was lost similarly when he managed to chew through the thick wire leash he was tied to. Omelet had a habit of chewing through normal leashes, and the McCurdy's thought that thick wire would do the trick.

"Either someone used bolt cutters to cut that dog out, or he managed to smuggle a hack saw in his coat again," explains Kyle McCurdy, first and last surviving son of the cannibalistic McCurdy family. "If anything, I hope he pays for this. That wire cost me eight bucks."

After escaping from their captors, Sage and Omelet ran for the hills, and evaded capture for a total of four days. Little is known about what happened during those four days, but what is known is that at some point Omelet was devoured by the young Hahn son.

Rescuers eventually found Sage deep in a ravine with little hope of survival. His only belongings were nineteen Warhammer action figures, which he had set up in an epic battle scene.

"Go my Inquisitorial Storm Troopers! Slay the Daemon hunters! Space Ma-rines!!! Invade the bases! Use your psy-cannons!" Sage was well at home with his figurines and didn't notice the rescuers until they stepped on the Inquisitor himself. "Nooooo! What have you done? Now you shall perrrrriisssssshhh!"

The only sign of the lost Omelet du Fromage were small clumps of fur clinging to Sir Sage. Rescue personnel originally thought he may have eaten a mouse or porcupine, but it soon turned out it was something far worse.

"It looked a lot like that lost dog's fur," said Taylor Freeman, the rescuer who found the Hahn child. "So much so that I could imagine it still attached to the cute little ears of Omelet du Fromage. What a sweet little doggie."

His suspicions proved true when x-rays showed small dog bones, a collar, and a rubber chew toy inside Sage's stomach. Seventeen operations later, every last bit of the beagle were removed.

"Sure, we're sad and all, but that little thing had it coming to him," said a source which prefers to remain anonymous. We are not even allowed to disclose whether it was Omelet's or Sage's parents. "Had he not gotten lost, he wouldn't have gotten into this mess."

Sage and Omelet's remains were reunited with their respective owners, to which there was much rejoicing. A lesson was learned, and that was to never trust plain old wire to hold your dog or child. Use electrified or barbed wire next time just to be sure. 🐾

Home Improvement for Sororities

By Yusuke Hasegawa ~ Daily Bull

Recently there has been an incident involving a specific Sorority discharging members for not actively participating in recruitment and not being committed to the values of the house. There have been allegations that the members of the house were kicked out for being fat, ugly, and generally unpopular with the boys. It was even suspected that racism played a role for some of the girls' dismissal. While the girls that were let-go all looked like they sit around a lot and don't eat many salads, it was also true that they were not very committed to recruitment and promotion. The arguments on both sides are very persuasive, but this whole fiasco could've been avoided had they lived in a more modern, regulated sorority house that promotes academic integrity and sisterhood.

With a couple of changes to their old house, they could've saved themselves a lot of embarrassment and bad press.

Thinner Doors

It is a well-known fact that a lot of heat in the house escapes through its doors. By replacing the standard door with a doorway a 1/3 of the regular width, you can save on heating cost while giving the house a chic new-age look. This alone would've attracted new members who qualified for their strict academic standards.

Glass Walls

Opaque walls and curtains only promote alcohol abuse and other illegal activities. By replacing the walls with see-through glass, campus security and neighborhood watch can keep an eye on the house and put a stop to any suspicious behavior that might otherwise go unreported. The members would feel safe, and the house would be known for their security and concern for the members well-being.

Knee-Height Tables

All chairs will be removed, and all tables lowered to be perfect height for when kneeling. This will encourage fitness and discipline within the house since it will take strong leg muscles to stay upright. Also push-ups are easier on your knees.

Eating through a Straw

To eliminate the danger of choking, gagging, and death, every food item will be blended into a milky shake and ingested through a straw. This will promote healthy eating and stronger jaws.

First-Aid Training

Even with the elimination of solid foods, injuries are impossible to completely prevent. With proper first-aid and CPR training every member will be ready and eager to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitations in any situation. Training sessions can also make for great rushes and community bonding.

Separation of Living Quarters

A separate building will be constructed next to each house to help mediate civil conflict within the house. These "Sisters' Quarters" will house members who don't fall inline with the house's values. A separate, but equal living environment will be provided until their differences can be resolved. In case of insufficient resources, the doghouse will be repurposed for these facilities.

With these improvements to the house, the issues would've been resolved passively and the members who weren't as committed to the house would have left on their own accord. 🐾
