The Daily Bull is probably not suitable for those under age 18 and should not be taken seriously... like making marijuana jokes on 4/20!

The Future of Society

By Nick Nelson ~ Daily Bull

Whether you're religious, spiritual, or atheistic, everyone takes some sort of interest in prophecy. A man once said, "Tonight is the end of men! Celebrate men!" He then proceeded to hurl a large bag of trash at his friend because he was drunk, but that part isn't important. One could also lead into the topic of déjà vu, a lesser and more common form of prophecy, but that could entail another article entirely. Then you have general dreams, visions, paranormal activity, etc. etc... the list goes on and on. Let's examine a few anonymous prophecies I've uncovered.

the sea, which would take several millennia. Now, I have no problem with prophecy – in fact, I usually take good humor in it – but someone this stupid needs a swift punch in the balls.

Prince William will be captured in Iraq, locked in a meat freezer, and left to die. I don't even need to explain this one because it already killed itself. They probably don't even have meat freezers in Iraq. Seriously, WTF?

American troops will withdraw from Iraq and Afghanistan. Either that or they will just stay there. Not much of a prophecy when you have a 50-50 chance to be right.

A large area of southern Louisiana will break and sink into the Gulf of Mexico due to an earthquake. Let's see, Louisiana is in the middle of a giant tectonic plate with no active fault lines within at least 500 miles. In addition, since continents don't float on water, the entire suspect area would have to erode into

Scientology is made the official religion of California, and the state secedes from the United States. I just made that up, but I hope it happens. We need something else to nuke besides sand – like

...Future from front celebrities and bad sitcoms.

Muslims will die because of sores in their armpits caused by a breeze. This one I didn't make up, obviously because I don't do drugs. Oh wait, this is a religious prophecy. It's a fine example of why submissive religion is totally lame and people need to own up to all the good and the bad about themselves.

Poodles will evolve with bright pink hair and the ability to hover. Yeah, I can dig that one, seems pretty legit to me.

I've only gotten this far but I've read many more prophecies on the Internet, and I must say, religious people will stretch anything to ludicrous lengths or water down statements past being even generalized to prove that their blasphemy is fact. Since they all like to preach stuff that comes out their asses, I'll do the same and give you my predictions for the future.

- Sri Lanka will invade Japan.
- A volcano will erupt and let loose millions of UFOs that will destroy your mom's house.
- Treants will be discovered, once they go to war with Poland.
- Kittens will evolve skin glands that emit poisonous gases when people try to huff them.
- Britney Spears will be a grandmother before she turns thirty.
- I will invent a cult that will become incredibly popular, and I will send my minions to burn down the Vatican.
- The Daily Bull will start being professional.

The predictions I've listed are much more likely to happen than any religious ones, but at least the religious stuff makes a better comedy than Friends. ☺ professors just don't seem to understand. Get with the times! The new thing to do is give take-home exams, not based on straight facts that you were spoon-fed in class, but on real-world problems, which may or may not have a word or two from lecture. Example: "A train is traveling 60 miles per hour going from Marquette to Green Bay, while a bus is going 45 meters per in<sup>3</sup> from Earth to the constellation Andromeda. How many Jewish people ride the subway in Chicago?" Answer: Jewish people don't ride the subway, they take taxis. And your shirt is blue.

Finally, the last new thing going around is strep throat. It may not be cool, and it may not be fun, but it's going around none the less, so stop making out with random people on the sidewalk in-between classes, ok? ☺

Survival Tips

By Ross Schneider ~ Daily Bull

If you ever get into a situation where you're pulled over by a cop, and he says, "I've been waiting for you," reply with, "I know, I tried to get here as fast as I could."

If someone drops a cup in the cafeteria and it bounces 3 or more times, stare at the person. If they drop a tray in the cafeteria and one or more plates break, applaud them.

If you go to a restaurant, go to the bathroom first, and then get in line for food. That way, you won't have to do the 'pee dance' while waiting for your Whopper & fries.

If you ever get caught in the bathroom with your pants down, yell "Birthday Party!" and pull off the rest of your clothes. Might as well make it really interesting than sort of interesting.

In case you don't know, there are bathrooms on 90% of all touring buses, but bring your own toilet paper. Also, 76.4% of all statistics are made up on the spot, along with 54% of all facts.

If a girl says she's doing your mom, it's probably not true. Unless, of course, your mom swings that way, and is currently in that person's room.

Do UnderArmour baseball caps help increase your brain size? "Yes" says the man wearing the hat.

Grant Bolla – Fact or fiction?

If the food in the cafeteria is really bland, ranch dressing or Tabasco sauce will fix it. Trust me, it works with everything – eggs, pizza, bagels, yesterday's meatloaf, cereal, that goofy looking stuff they serve on Sunday night when the staff doesn't feel like making something new...you get my drift.

Will a monkey be okay living in a storage room? If so, will it cost $117 or less? Maybe I'll stick with a calf – at least until it gets too big to carry downstairs, when we take it on our Wacky Wednesday Walks.

So, I guess this has turned into more than a survival guide for students here at Tech, something to carry over to the next year. It's more like a, "Why didn't I think of these before?" story. One more thing – as long as you say "with all due respect," you can call someone any name you want. Go ahead, it's in the Geneva Convention.

And crepes are actually really thin pancakes. ☺
