Damn, I Really Need Peanut Butter

By Simon Mused ~ Daily Bull

Hey Kids! Are you freakin' hungry!? If your in college than the answer is YES! Well have I got a product for you! It's called peanut butter! What, no ramen you say? That's right. Unless you have peanut butter flavored ramen in your room (you sick bastard), you have got to get this stellar product, in bulk!

Peanut butter is nice in that it is peanuts in its most convenient form. Shelled nuts are annoying, and packaged nuts are not cool to be seen hanging out with unless your that same obnoxious fat guy in every section of every baseball game. It's good to buy peanut butter too, as making it yourself takes heat, power, and a whole ton of crazy.

People take their peanutty goodness very seriously. If your peanut butter is not 90% peanuts, it is legally not peanut butter under United States Federal law and thus must be called peanut spread. Even Congress knows that no one messes with the delicious nut paste. Artificial flavors, colors, and preservatives are also banished from peanut butter, making sure no one disrespects the nut.

Scientists also appreciate what goes into the art of spreading peanut butter on bread. Contrary to popular belief, George Washington Carver did not invent peanut butter (sorry minorities), but plenty of old farts did develop new ways to produce it and even come up with new techniques on spreading it.

The top scientists and engineers at the University of Georgia developed a machine that presses and "prints out" sheets of peanut butter and perfectly applies that sheet onto the bread. Now, if you ask me, they know how to put lab fees to good use! Screw that cure for the common cold, my bread does not have an even distribution of peanut butter, damnit! Researchers at Cambridge University have discovered that with enough heat and pressure, peanut butter can be turned into a diamond! Bubba, break out the pressure cooker! We got more than chicken to cook tonight!

You know something is wrong with your school when your sophomore-level class is harder than your graduate-level class...

Ask Katie Sheets

By Katie Sheets ~ Daily Bull

Dear Katie Sheets,

My boyfriend really likes how Asian girls look. He wants me to get plastic surgery so I resemble an Asian. What would you do in a situation like this?

Sincerely,
Very American-Looking

Dear Very American-Looking,

I have wanted to get plastic surgery to look like an Asian for a really long time!! I used to go to a Chinese food restaurant a lot. I loved it there. In fact, I loved it so much that I decided that I wanted to start my own Chinese restaurant. I wanted to call it "Jimmy Buffet." The only problem with this was rather blatantly obvious - I do not look like an Asian. I decided that I would get plastic surgery so I looked like an old Asian woman. I wanted to be the hostess of the restaurant because then I could say things like, "Welcome to Jimmy Buffet! Whatchoo wan to drint?" Upon telling my best friend about this idea, she immediately wanted to be part of Jimmy Buffet. The only problem was she was more of a behind the scenes kind of person, and she was deathly afraid of plastic surgery. In order to solve this dilemma we decided that she would be the cook! That solved everything except for one tiny detail... she could barely make macaroni, let alone Chinese food. After many hours of racking our brains for a solution we finally came up with a brilliant idea: she could simply microwave store-bought egg rolls! (We just wouldn't tell the customers that they were store bought.) Unfortunately, this meant the only thing on our menu would be egg rolls. We decided that that wasn't really important because every restaurant has it's 'special thing.' Our 'special thing' would just have to be microwaved and forms; those forms are creamy and crunchy. The difference between these warrants its own novel, but hands down crunchy sucks. Anyone who thinks otherwise should choke on their peanutty bits. But with hardly any categories of peanut butter, how does one decide on which one to buy? That's easy – brand names! Jif is good and easy to say. Peter Pan is good too, but a slogan like "Picky people pick Peter Pan peanut butter, it's the peanut butter picky people pick" deserves immediate crucifixion of all employees.

The nut-based spread of the gods could also be used as a cock-block for those special nights where your good friend Mr. Trojan is no where to be found. No not that kind of cock-block, the literal kind! Peanut butter makes a wonderful condom, just take a dab, spread, and allow time to dry. If you use organic peanut butter you can even get away with saying you're, "all natural, baby!" Spare your troops a battle they could never win, no matter how many TIE fighters you send in they will never defeat the Death Star. Of course in case of human error and your sealing fails, then congratulations! You are now the Father of Planter's newest mascot! Just be sure that when all is said and done you wash up, or your next trip to the john is going to feel like you just got back from a Dave Matthews Band concert.

Peanut butter has been cherished for centuries. Spreading it over bread is treated as an art, and that lucky connoisseur who spreads an even coat over every millimeter of bread surface feels like conquering Finland. So don't mess with it, or you'll have to deal with the Federal Government. ☹

Dear Katie Sheets,

It was my birthday today and my best friend didn't say anything about it. I think she forgot. How can I subtly let her know that I would love a "Happy Birthday" from her?

Sincerely,
Forgotten

Dear Forgotten,

Oh man. Happy Birthday?? I am a sucky friend.

Love,
Katie Sheets
