The Daily Bull is probably not suitable for those under age 18 and should not be taken seriously... like political dissention!

How To: Save the Planet

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller ~ Daily Bull ~

It was the morning of Winter Carnival, and I was trapped in the Daily Bull office, serving my sentence for being one of the few, the proud, the strong, and the hilarious enough to write for the Bull, when I realized I could be doing bigger and better things. Like saving the planet.

Now I'm sure many of you are counting on Al Gore (whose alter-ego is really Captain Planet) to save the world, but I've got something to declare: he's not. At least not without your help! Here's a great list of things you can do to help save the planet and be obedient little followers to the man who was once president for a few hours.

Tonka Toys

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller ~ Daily Bull

Boy has it been a long time since I was a little boy. Those were the days – sitting around watching cartoons, climbing trees, eating bugs, and playing with my toys. Not a care in the world; no schoolwork to deal with or politicians to worry about, nothing more than your friends knocking over your sand castles. And even if you were sad about something, you'd soon forget in two minutes what you were so despondent about.

One thing from those days of yore stands out distinctly in my mind above all the rest: my Tonka trucks.

Gosh, if there's one thing in the world that'd make me truly happy, it'd be going back in time and working on all those imaginary construction sites I set up in my driveway. No wonder I went into Civil Engineering.

Alas, even though this school is overrun with perfectly good engineers, nobody has figured out how to build a time machine. My dreams! Will they ever be realized?! All I want is a chance to relive my glory days, when having the time of my life was as simple as:

 -Opening the door of my house.
 -Walking to sandbox, trying not to be distracted by a hula-hoop, bouncy balls, or grasshoppers.
 -Sitting down in my sandbox and vroom-vrooming my little machines around.

Unfortunately, things aren't that easy anymore. For one, all of my toys have rusted away. Now what'll I play with? I can't really bring myself to go steal the neighbor kids' toy trucks, even though they deserve it for making me jealous with their Ultra Deluxe Dump Truck with dual dumping action.

No, if I wanted to have fun with Tonka Trucks again, I'd have to move onto bigger and better things. For the longest time (maybe 4 minutes), my desires eluded me. Then one morning while trying to go back to sleep after being woken up by the plow trucks, I had a revelation – I want a bulldozer.

Not just a little baby Tonka dozer, no. I want the real deal, the whole kit and caboodle. Bulldozers, front end loaders, excavators, you name it, I want it. Really really bad.

I'm sure I'm not the only one around who wants some heavy machinery they can tear around in. After all, man's greatest desire is simply to destroy – at least that's my greatest desire. And when you've got five tons of munching steel at your control, it's anything goes. Dibs on the neighborhood.

Whenever I think about heavy machinery, my mind goes wild. Images of wrecking balls swinging through houses, steam rollers flattening small dogs, and tunnel boring machines swallowing up playgrounds full of children all come to mind quite readily, as well as countless other mesmerizing fantasies.

During one of these fascinating day-dreams of 'accidentally' running over a number of students on McNair hill with a backhoe, I realized how to fulfill my dreams. All I'd have to do was get hired to remove snow piles all over campus, and I could drive the equipment as much as I wanted. Hell, I'd do it for free it'd be so fun.

Hand me the keys facilities, I'm ready to work! I'll move snow faster than Mike Mulligan can dig holes! Just fork over your jumbo-sized Tonka equipment, and you'll never have to worry about working with them again. Trust me, I'm practically a professional. 🙄 needed a great way to recycle paper. When they're done reading the Daily Bull, they ball it up and throw it at me if I'm sitting in our adjacent, much nicer and comfier cubicle. This has progressed into playing Battleship between our two cubes. Feel free to toss your finished Bulls at us writers when you're done with them.

Save Energy: Do you know how much energy went into filling that keg? Me neither, but I'm sure it's a lot. You don't want that energy to go to waste, do you? Of course not, because that means wasted beer! Make sure to always finish your alcoholic beverages, and never dump it into your local storm drains. Drunken fish are even worse than polluted water.

Smash Old Electronics: Do you realize how much space an old CRT

monitor or television takes up in our landfills? Even a broken calculator has unutilized air pockets that can be filled. Prevent this wastage by compacting your old electronics before putting them in the dumpster. Ignore people who say you're releasing toxins into the environment with every swing of your sledgehammer. They're probably landfill owners who want your money.

Burn Garbage: Nobody wants nasty old batteries and spray cans fermenting in a garbage pit! That's why you should burn them. It's a win-win situation. You prevent all those chemicals from seeping into the groundwater, and you get to watch things explode. What more could you ask for?

Eliminate Smelly Animals: Did you know cows produce extremely high levels of methane, a major contributor to global warming? That's why we should kill them! I propose a shoot-on-sight order for all cows, who are mischievously trying to kill us all off first. But I like cows for their meat, so instead I think we should build a giant dome over all the cows and harvest the methane for energy; and then eat them.

Use More Internets: In this day and age, the Internet can do everything. And when I say everything, I mean that you don't even have to get up from your bed to complete your entire day. Go to class on the web, order food to be delivered to your door online, and fill your office hours via webcam. It's the wave of the future. The wave of the future... the wave of the future.

Grow Marijuana: The advantages are obvious. Marijuana plants suck CO₂ out of the atmosphere, and when they're done growing you can use them for a number of completely beneficial uses.

Turn Off Lights: It's not like you need lights on in class anyway, right? If you're going to be asleep, you might as well have them off to begin with. There you have it. The next time someone brings up how environmentally irresponsible you are, just tell them some of these tips that you follow. That'll get em off your back for sure. 🙄
