The Daily Bull is probably not suitable for those under age 18 and should not be taken seriously... like North Korea's 60th anniversary!

Tim Kotula is Already Out of Article Ideas

By Tim Kotula ~Daily Bull

Note: Tim Kotula, our current Editor-in-Chief, is training a replacement, John Earnest, so that he can get the hell out of the Bull. With luck John will continue to dream big dreams for the Bull, and maybe even realize one of them.
~Invincible

Why I was dumb enough to take on the challenge of writing even one article, I'll never know. I swear I wasn't drunk at the time, but maybe someone slipped something onto my pizza. Yeah, that's it.

So now I'm stuck writing a single article this semester, and I have no clue what to write about. I came up with the following list of appropriate topics.

-CS Majors Stink, LOL

-ASIA!

-An Analysis of the Gum Disease Known as...(wait for it)...GINGIVITIS

A New Beginning

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller ~ Daily Bull

Well, the Daily Bull somehow managed to survive another year, and here we are yet again to entertain you through your classes. How do we do it? I don't honestly know. We should be dead and gone, having thrown in the towel to our much more serious and successful cousin the Lode. But one way or another we made it, and I'd like to think it's because of shining stars such as yours truly, Nathan "Invincible" Miller.

Sure, there may have been other stars out there trying to save the day, but they weren't nearly as bright. We'll call them White Dwarfs (to be fair, none of them are anything but Caucasian, so that works out quite nicely). I guess I'll be a Supernova since I'm the brightest, except that in my case I'm not going to explode or collapse into a black hole cause I'm Invincible and that'd be impossible.

Now, let's say that all of us Daily Bull members were thrown into the heavens to repopulate space. What you would see would be very saddening, as there would be maybe 20 specks of light. At this point you may be thinking, "Gosh, looks like I should go grab my Katamari and start rolling up inanimate objects into stars, cause if I don't the King of the Cosmos and his tight pants are gonna come and beat me up." Unfortunately, you're wrong.

What you should be thinking instead is, "By golly, I'm not gonna let the skies go dark! I should join the Daily Bull to add another star to the sky. Forge my destiny! Blaze a new path! It'll be a new beginning for astrologers everywhere!" At least that's what I thought when I joined on with the Bull, which is a completely painless process just so long as you don't come to our meetings packing heat or machetes. Unless you're going to juggle them for us.

In fact, joining up with the Daily Bull is so effortless, I'll even make for you instructions on what to do if you want to join. Here they are, in case you're confused.

1. Read the Daily Bull.
2. Think that it is funny.
3. Believe that you, too, could write interesting, thoughtful, or particularly amusing articles like us – or possibly better.
4. Get yourself over to Walker on Wednesday at 9:15 by any means possible. Segways, rocket ships, stampedes of zoo animals, or in the stomach of Nathan Wonders: New Columns?

Brought to you by Nathan "Invincible" Miller

Well it's about time, but I've finally finagled my way into my very own weekly column, which comes out almost as often as the rest of my material (or so it would seem). Not to disappoint, it will be almost exactly like everything else I write: completely true, unbiased, and jam-packed with all the best BS this side of the Bermuda Triangle.

But! Straying from the norm, I will attempt to prove to you, the unbeknownst-to-the-truth-reader, something that I'm almost certain you never thought about. Especially simple things that you thought could not possibly have any other way of being, such as Swiss cheese or various parts of the human body.

Reader be warned now: I am not responsible for your grades if you cite my articles in research papers. While I may have the perfect argument as to why I'm right, there's always some stuck up scientist out there with a perfect argument as well, except he's got million dollar research grants to help him be more right than me. No fair. I bet he can't wonder as well as me though – ha! Get it on!

the Ski Free Monster are preferred methods.

5. Arrive at our meeting in one piece and able to at the very least tell us your name before you proceed to step 6.

6. Enjoy our free pizza, laugh at our corny and original jokes, and most of all, become a member of the most hilarious and one of the farthest reaching student organizations on campus.

And because everything is better with a lucky number of steps, #7 will be that you can meet me! Nathan "Invincible" Miller. After all, what could possibly be better than that? Actually now that I think about it, a lot of things are probably better than meeting me. Such as meeting me and getting $5. Now there's a recruitment idea.

You think you have what it takes? Come strut your stuff down with us at the Daily Bull. Possibly get five dollars, if you're lucky. Remember, you don't necessarily have to write articles to be a part of the Bull. Some of the best minds on the staff list do just that – nothing at all! That could be you! So hurry up, the skies are waiting! ☺

I've come to the conclusion that these topics are all old, worn-out, and too familiar. You, the Bull audience, deserve better than that for once (woah, not that much better! Let's not get ahead of ourselves here). So, as a tip of the cap to one who shall be referred to only as "Twitch Boy", I present to you a list of jokes. If it was good enough for him, it's good enough for me.
