Details Sketchy At Caricature Booth Murder

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller ~ Daily Bull

In what is being called "The worst tragedy since those 18 kids were electrocuted on the malfunctioning bumper car ride," 19 year-old professional caricature artist Joey Vella was murdered yesterday at his booth in Six Flags Darien Lake, outside Buffalo, NY. Police investigators are at a loss for finding potential suspects, as the only evidence in the case thus far is the half-finished portrait of the assailant.

"At first glance, you'd think it'd be easy to locate a guy with an abnormally large head, beady little eyes, an overly thick torso, and small legs, but you'd be surprised. This is no simple task," explains Constable A. Phillips. "As it turns out, through the eyes of a trained caricature artist, we all look obnoxiously similar to the suspect. Thus, any male between the ages of 12 and 64, and even some butch looking females, could be our killer."

Up until his gruesome passing, Vella had been one of Six Flags Darien Lake's most prolific caricature artists, turning ordinary looking people into babies, devils, football stars, and huge breasted bikini babes.

"I'm told he was very good at making even the ugliest women into total hotties," says Phillips. "You never know, that may have been a motive. Sometimes a few too many times on the Mind Eraser will put a man on edge and wham! – he'll pop a guy's head off at the slightest thing. I've seen it several times at county fairs, but never a big-name theme park."

Joey's lifeless body was found dragged from his stool, where he sits for the bulk of his 6 hour shift, to behind an ornately cut hedge row depicting the New York City skyline, having crossed a main pedestrian tributary and three excessively long lines for food and cold beverages. How no one managed to notice a dead body being moved in plain sight was a mystery until fellow artist Alex Normand explained.

In retrospect, there probably are better threads. Just that they're often not appropriate or are too extremely weird to be put here. Think of this as protecting your sanity.

"To be frank, your average park-goer just doesn't give a damn what goes on, as long as it doesn't interfere with their fun. Why, I could strip naked and do a jig on my stool and hardly anyone would even notice as long as I kept drawing and answering their questions as to where the nearest bathroom is. Most people aren't here to solve a murder – they just want some overpriced cotton candy and gigantic stuffed animals."

"They probably thought his slaying was part of some show," he adds. "Typically we'd promote that sort of thing, as long as our own staff don't die. Good for ratings, if you know what I mean."

half-finished image of the killer in the hopes that someone may recognize him, but Constable Phillips isn't very optimistic. When asked what the chances of finding the suspect were, he replied, "There's as good a chance of finding this guy as there is having somebody's wallet fall out of their pocket on a roller coaster loop-the-loop and into your open arms. In other words, nada."

Six Flags expressed their condolences to the Vella family by constructing a caricatured sculpture of Joey to be placed near where he diligently ruined the day of countless park visitors. The sculpture, with its distinctly French artist look and spindly arms and legs, will hopefully inspire guests to spend their money on something more worthwhile, such as a t-shirt proclaiming, "I Survived the Superman Roller Coaster!" or an enormous lollipop that couldn't possibly fit into one's mouth. ☹

Never fear Mr. I'm-the-head-of-my-student-org or Ms. Advertising-manager-who-isn't-making-as-big-of-an-impact-as-I-should-be. The Daily Bull can help. Here at the Bull, we pride (or as close to pride as we can muster) ourselves in that we can get a message out to the masses. If ever there was a way to get to a lot of people in an inexpensive manner, it'd be us. We're cheapskates, plain and simple.

For example, our printer and computer are about as old as the MUB itself, however old that may be. I just know that they've been around a long, long time. That's because we're too cheap to spend money on ourselves- we give it all back to the community, the community of MTU students. We devote all of our labors to entertaining you readers and rarely ever take for ourselves (there is the Studio Pizza at our meetings, but that is used to keep us alive).

Now, by spending our entire budget on the people and not ourselves, we have the potential to touch a very wide audience: hundreds or thousands each week. Beat that Spaghetti Monster! Not only do we print 500 copies of every issue, we now have an email list of nearly 200 lucky souls. With 3 issues a week or more, you're talking millions of seconds spent reading a sheet of paper that could have your message boldly placed within its crisp edges. The potential is practically unlimited!

Get to people in class. Get to people in the MUB. Get to people at 3 a.m. in their labs as they toil away on a final project. Even occasionally get to faculty members who have a sense of humor. With a campus-wide viewership in the thousands, you can be sure to get your message out to far more than by merely posting a flyer on a board. And with dirt-cheap advertising rates and a very negotiable new leader (Moi), you can hardly go wrong.
