Scales

By Liz Fujita ~Daily Bull

Imagine this. You're walking along in the forest on a pleasantly warm, breezy summer day. The path crunches delightfully beneath your feet, carrying you ever closer to a brilliant green field at the edge of the wood. When you get to the luscious greenery, you decide to take off your shoes and feel the cool nature between your toes. You make a face not unlike this one ^_^ and frolic like a bunny. Suddenly and impolitely, cool nature turns into sharp, burning nature – ow! "Ow, &*%$#@, Mommy! Owwie," you cry! You've been bitten by an ant, and if you're like me, you'd probably retell this story and say that it hurt "like a bitch." But you and I, dear friend, would be wrong. We should have said it hurt as if "someone has fired a staple into your cheek."

There are scales for a lot of things – hurricanes, earthquakes, even the hardness of minerals. I'm pretty sure everyone's heard of those, since I have, and I live under a fairly large rock. But did you know that there is a scale for the magnitude of sting pain? Yes, insect stings. It goes from 1 to 4+, anywhere from, "a tiny spark has singed a single hair on your arm" to, "fire-walking over flaming charcoal with a 3-inch rusty nail in your heel" (insert cringe here). Think I'm kidding? Wiki it – Schmidt Sting Pain Index. Wow, talk about free time. So if people have the energy to measure how much insect stings suck, imagine all the other things we could be measuring! Everything in the world could have a scale all its own! No more would measurement be reserved for natural disasters and how endangered things are. O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!

How tired are you, dear reader? Perhaps you're at 0: "coffee has been injected intravenously into your system, and you were tossed into an ice cold shower privates-first." Maybe you're somewhere in the middle, at 5: "stayed up too late last night playing Halo-" (and didn't call me, you jerk) "-but did drink a Monster." Or, worst of all, you're a 10: "having been placed, comatose, into a cryogenic freezer and sold to a Hutt." How schizophrenic are you? Maybe one is "No, Voice, I'd rather not listen to Mariah Carey." And perhaps by five we hear three distinct voices. Maybe each one hears voices, too. And each of those voices-ses sounds like Gollum, yesss, preciousss.

I love comedy, so let's make a scale for that. At the bottom end is a bad joke, one that's not even funny; maybe a "your mom" joke. Somewhere low-midrange is the, "that's what she said" joke. Toward the high-midrange you have people like Bo Burnham and Jim Gaffigan. What would the highest rank of comedy be, a gigantic Demetri Martin – Mitch Hedberg – Greg Proops – Dane Cook smoothie? I don't know, but that'd be some funny shit though.

How much of a planet do you live on? Rated 10 – Earth! Definitely a planet, nobody would ever think to question that. Rated 0 – Pluto. I miss you, buddy. 🐾

A Quick Note

By popular demand (or because we are nice), here's a list of where the Bull typically appears everyday we have an issue (currently Wed.-Thurs.-Fri.). We may expand to Tuesday as well if we get enough people writing, which would be awesome. Join up if you think you've got the right stuff. Meetings are every Wednesday at 9:15 pm, somewhere in first floor Walker (I always forget the room, sorry. Next time.)

So without further adieu, here are the drop locations for your free entertainment. Your welcome Peter.
