"Never tell anyone that you're writing a book, going on a diet, exercising, taking a course, or quitting smoking. They'll encourage you to death."
~Lynn Johnston

This Space For Rent

By Nathan "King of all Cosmos" Miller

We lost them. The articles. They are all gone. poof Now we're sad.

As the obligatory King of all Cosmos for the Daily Bull, it's my job to make sure that all the stars, er, articles, are in their rightful place. Which means you, my intrepid and brave prince or princess, must help us find the lost articles. This means using your Katamari to roll up ordinary objects and create new articles that can be used. This is your heroic task.

Prince! Are you up to the challenge? Of course you are. We believe in you. Don't fail us prince! Only you can help make the Bull as great as it was. And if that means writing about the King of all Cosmos or sending in funny pictures to us at dailybull@gmail.com, then so be it. Go!

My Favorite Kids Books

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller ~ Daily Bull

Over break I was fortunate and bored enough to read all my favorite books from when I was a little kid, and let's just say the pictures were awesome. It's too bad books these days aren't as great as these classics. Twilight? The Da Vinci Code? Gimme a break. Nothing inspires me more than made-up characters who do ridiculously simplistic things. Here's a few of my all-time favs.

Goodnight Moon.

The heartfelt tale of a little bunny rabbit who has to go to bed at 8 p.m. Those were the days! I even forgot practically the best part: two little kittens and a pair of mittens! So cute! Almost makes me want to start saying goodnight to everything I own before I go to bed every night.

Mike Mulligan And His Steam Shovel.

Best. Book. Ever. It was Mike Mulligan and his intrepid steam shovel Mary Anne who got me digging holes when I was a young and impressionable child. Oh, the joy on my parent's faces when they realized they'd have a steam shovel operator as a son! Now I have to do is take a trip to the Popperville town hall to pay a visit to my idols and I'll be all set.

Cloudy With a Chance of Meatballs.

Did somebody say storms of hamburgers?! DELICIOUS! I tried to find the town of Chewandswallow on Google maps, but I got nothing. Now how am I ever supposed to experience skittles raining from the sky? =(

Stone Soup.

Three hungry soldiers return from fighting on the front lines and their hometown peasants won't even spare a scrap of food. How rude! Luckily these crafty guys trick the collectivized peasants into making the best soup ever, and all they did was add some smooth stones to a pot. World hunger = solved.

Any book by Jon Scieszka.

Hilarity! If picture books had awards for the best pictures, the illustrations in his books would win them five hundred

...Read em and Weep from front times over. From The True Story of the 3 Little Pigs to The Frog Prince Continued, Scieszka's books rock in every which way possible, and then some. They're practically graphic novels for little kids. And let's not forget his crowning achievement: The Stinky Cheese Man and other Fairly Stupid Tales. Reading it over again brought tears to my eyes! How could such an epic collection of fairy tales not be on everyone's bookshelf? I'm pretty sure it's these books that got me on my way to being a Daily Bull writer.

The Last Basselope.

Did you know that before Opus was a newspaper cartoon character he was an Expedition Leader in search of the ferocious Last Basselope? I did, but that's because I read the extremely well put together book by Mr. Breathed. Another great book he did was Red Ranger Came Calling, a gem of a Christmas story I happened to read on the eve of the holiday itself.

These books are so good, it's almost like they weren't made for kids at all. Plus, Red Ranger has one of my favorite pictures of all time: a tree with a bike in the middle of it. Awesomeness. 🐻
