But it wasn't until someone decided to pull the hair out of a horse's behind and pluck it that music really took off in the U.P. Once thought to be the invention of a pocket of desperate Native musicians living deep in the Porcupine Mountains, it was discovered that Greg "Righty" Mandowski, of Copper Harbor, inadvertently created the first guitar when he drunkenly tried to get on his horse in 1882. Ever since, this simple instrument has been key to the success of bands the world over.

Fast forward to the 1950s. A group of disgruntled Tech students, fed up with hearing Elvis non-stop on the local AM stations, decided to rig up their own. In 1956, WVRW was born, but was quickly changed to WMTU once everyone realized it sounded a lot cooler. Since that fateful day (no one is sure which, as they were too busy making sweet sweet music), WMTU has been rocking strong, integrating every genre of music into its 24/7 schedule. Not a day goes by when WMTU doesn't make history for being the greatest station in the Keweenaw.

Interested in learning more? Listen in on your car stereo at 91.9 FM, or check it out online at wmtu.mtu.edu. Or if you really want to be awesome, WMTU is hosting its millionth annual CRUSHATHON heavy rock concert over at the Level 2 Skatepark in Houghton this Saturday. It's gonna be hardcore. Or, you know, there's always my show 7-10 pm every Saturday. Best electronic this side of the Atlantic, guaranteed. Either way, you win. ☺ find my way around computers quite passably, I'm no guru. I have twice shot myself in the foot (metaphorically, thank goodness) by doing hard drive "spring cleaning." Both times, I delete some old documents, fine... "hey, what's this folder doing there? Doesn't seem important." Click. Poof! It's gone. Well, next thing you know, something has exploded.

...Delete! from front

The first time I tried clearing up space, I managed to delete something called a .dll file. I confess, to this day I have absolutely no idea what that means. NO! STOP! I don't want to know - all I know is that next thing I knew, my computer had issues booting up. At all. I'd fire it up and eight million messages popped up, "This and that is missing!" or "This operation can't be performed because you're a dunce!" If it did manage to get running, the OS would inevitably throw up all over itself halfway through whatever I was doing. Needless to say, the other members of my family who used that machine were not jumping for joy.

You'd think I would learn following this obnoxious stroke of idiocy, but no. Oh, no. That would be too easy, too instinctive.

Just two weeks ago, I once again succumbed to the temptation to clear my hard drive of some clutter. I mean, I only get so much space - why be wasting it with things that are never going to see the light of day? Well, let's see here... boink - there go some documents from last semester. Splat - there go a few miscellaneous games I never play, maybe some pictures that didn't turn out. Whoosh - there goes some extraneous file from the iTunes folder.

I went to iTunes as usual, and all of a sudden, I couldn't listen to my own music - things I have purchased on this computer, on my account! "Please authorize this computer to play this file!" it screamed. Type type, in goes my password... error. Unable to authorize? It's MY MUSIC; it's already authorized! Wait... that was a disposable folder, right?

Perhaps, I thought, it'll be fixable if I just remove my computer from the list of machines authorized to play my purchases. That seems logical. As it turned out, I couldn't even de-authorize myself from my own computer. Whose idea was this?!

I finally realized that un- and re-installing iTunes would fix it, since whatever folder I torched would be recreated when it installed again. But that soft, glowing, 40-watt bulb of an idea didn't occur to me until after a good half hour of tearing my hair out and throwing conniptions. Needless to say, I've been sufficiently slapped in the face - twice now! - that I don't think I will make the same mistake again. This is a tech school, and as a very, very belated New Year's resolution, I promise to consult someone who knows what's going on before I hit the delete key, lest I accidentally set off a bioweapon somewhere.

The only way out of here is if I use my machete to take down a helicopter...
