Album Review: Invaders Must Die

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller
~ Daily Bull ~

Well! On March 2, The Prodigy's new album, Invaders Must Die, was released to massive fanfare. I didn't get it until the following Saturday (thanks Amazon), but once I cracked it open, my eardrums were crying tears of joy. I love it! For those who may not know, The Prodigy are one of the highest acclaimed Electronic groups in the world and have a loyal following in the tens of millions. Wanna take a spin? Here's a rundown of their newest album so you know what to look out for.

1. Invaders Must Die: Huge! What a great way to kick off their first album since 2004. A club winner if I do say so myself. They released a downloadable sample of the song late last year, and the album version is even better. Will definitely be

Want White Teeth? Don't Sneeze!

By Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

We in this country have a strange obsession with what we look like. We buy pieces of cloth soaked with berry juices and other unnatural things, then hang them over our various appendages - this is called 'fashion.' We buy scented goop to rub on our heads to make curtains of spent proteins look less dead - this is called 'being worth it!' And some of us buy chemicals designed to kill everything, then in a fit of evolutionary stupidity stick them in our mouths to make our fangs perfectly white, like snow or marshmallows. Or Klan members.

I'm talking about Crest Whitestrips - and I'm wondering how many people here have ever used them. They stick to your teeth by magic, and little bleach fairies go to work ripping the non-white surface clean off of your teeth, to make them look more like marshmallows. It's pretty barbaric, actually, but it all takes place on such a microscopic level that we don't think about it that way.

The box that the Crest strips come in is really big. It could hold a small loaf of bread. Instead, it holds 42 little strips for your top teeth, 42 slightly-smaller strips for your bottom teeth, a little blue box to convoy your forces in, and directions on how best to use them. The rest of the space in the box doesn't really have anything in it, which seems stupid. Maybe it's for storing all of your sanity after you lose it trying to use the product.

See, the directions in the small breadbox have a couple of warnings. 'Avoid eye contact!' they implore, just in case you're one of those people that confuses your eyes with your mouth, or who doesn't think that Visene is good enough. Another warning says that applying the strips may turn your fingertips white for a short time, until you wash them off. Only your fingertips. Apparently the bleach doesn't whiten your gums, further convincing me that these things work by magic. Somewhere else

Mr. MTU?!

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller on behalf of the good sisters over at OXE Did. You. Know. Probably not. Whenever I ask that question, you can be sure you don't know. That way I can tell you. But seriously. Don'tcha know?

Tell us! Tell us! We want to know! Quiet you munchkins. Ok here's the deal. I'm only gonna tell you cause I think you're cute. Some of you. Scratch that, only a few. But you lucky few, you can spread the word: Theta Chi Epsilon, those crazy sisters over on Hubble Street, are once again holding the world-famous Mr. MTU competition! Joy!

Wait, you don't know what Mr. MTU is? Neither did I until I got signed up for it. See, when it comes down to it, Mr. MTU is a courageous attempt at solving the world's ills through kindness and charity. See, the girls of Theta Chi Epsilon, they're actually saints. But don't tell them I told you that, nobody is supposed to know.

This year's Mr. MTU donations are gonna go to the American Cancer Society. How do you donate? Well, that's where I come in. They've got a penny wars sort of deal set up in the MUB and Fisher from 11 or 12 til 2, MTW. Wait, it's already Wednesday! That means you better get down there fast! Donate that change! Go go go!

If you get there in time, you'll notice that I am a candidate in this crazy contest. If I'm in the top 5 of those 8 fine gentlemen listed, I'll go on to the mega Mr. MTU competition, held Thursday night, 7:30 pm, in the DHH study lounge. There you will be bombarded with a Yooperwear competition, a "talent contest," and other quality entertainment. Hit it up!

...The Cresty from front on the package, it says that if you don't feel like remembering to apply them both in the morning and evening, you can double up - after the first thirty minutes, just put on another one and be done for the day.

That last one is a lie. Don't double-up on those things.

I decided that, because I have a memory like a noodle strainer, I'd do what they suggested and apply my stain-warriors back-to-back. Sure, it sounded good, until after I removed the second one. Twenty minutes go by... ow! Random stabbing pain in my teeth! A little while later... dammit!! Random stabbing pain in my teeth!! I'm not having fun, Crest! They tell you on the directions that sensitivity 'may' occur from using the product, but seriously - what the hell?

The other warning that they should tuck into the space where your sanity goes is that you can't really use your mouth to its full potential while the killer bleach molecules are doing their thing. Talking sort of works. Breathing works. Smiling and laughing work. But God forbid you have to sneeze.

No. Really.

Do a voodoo dance to stop it, get your nose cut off, take copious amounts of cold medicine, it doesn't matter - but don't sneeze. Otherwise you have a nasty, bleachy piece of sticky plastic hurtling through the air and landing somewhere that, like your eyes, Crest doesn't want you to put them. Bleach fairies don't care if it's your teeth, your hands, or your laptop. They just want to kill anything that isn't perfectly white. Just like Klan members. 🐾 get 4 stars.

2. Omen: A sign of good things to come? I think so. While not quite as powerful as Invaders Must Die, there is what I'd like to call "lyrical madness," which means what little bit of words there are make the song. A solid 4.5 stars!

3. Thunder: Takes me back to their old song Fire from 92's album Experience. It doesn't have the slammin' beats like the first two, and it definitely lacks lyrical madness. For being a tiny bit repetitive, it gets 3 stars.

4. Colours: This one slips by fairly unnoticed. A bit too chimey for my liking, which I haven't really liked since they did Charly. 3 stars.

5. Take Me to the Hospital: I'm assuming they made this one in honor of their new label, Take Me to the Hospital. A decent number, it has some of the same background chirping voice as Always Outnumbered, Never Outgunned, but keeps it together for 4 stars.

6. Warrior's Dance:

Bass boost this one my friend, you'll not be disappointed. Warrior's Dance = intensity. And with a little break about half-way through, you'll have just enough time for a breather before it comes back for more. Woop! 4 stars.

7. Run With the Wolves: I almost gave this one a 3, but I went back and took a second listen and fell for a bit of lyrical madness and bass bonanza. 4 stars it is!

8. Omen Reprise: Since when is a reprise nearly as long as the actual song? Might still get played some-time on my show. 3 stars.

9. World's On Fire: Not sure what kind of line "world's on fire" is, but it didn't really jive with me. Came out sounding more like, "hairs on fire." This song is everywhere. 3 stars.

10. Piranha: It's good, and I'm not sure why. It just clicks, like a bunch of average guys on a sports team who can do one thing a little better than the rest. When they combine their skills, they manage to win a few games. And for that, they

11. Stand Up: WOW. If you've never heard a Prodigy song in your life, they're basically punk rock and techno combined. It's ugly, screamy, and loud as all hell. Stand Up? It's happy! I never saw it coming - it was like woah. How could a group who became popular making songs like Smack My Bitch Up turn around and have such a peppy hit? Barely nudging out Invaders Must Die, Stand Up earns the top pick and 5 sparklin' stars. Sweetness!

If you're hankering to hear some of the best electronic out there, tune in to my WMTU radio show, every Saturday night from 7-10 pm. You can be sure I'll be playing a ton of Prodigy this weekend. Do it! 🐾
