What Glenn Beck Does Best

By Alec Hamer ~ Daily Bull

Glenn Beck, a "popular," "balanced," "news commentator" for Fox News likes to say some extreme things; extreme things that many, such as myself, don't agree with or even respect. So I thought I would share with you, America, a few of the things Glenn Beck does best.

1: Cry. It is a commonly known fact that Glenn is a big baby and his crying only emphasizes this. It is not the crying that bothers me though, it is the way he mixes the crying with the sheer anger that follows. He will go from talking one moment about how this nation's greatest moment was September 12, 2001, an opinion that is flaky at best, to once again decrying anything that he views as "communist" or "liberal" (pretty much anything that doesn't fit into his fascist agenda).

Flo-Rida, Kanye West to Offer Public Apologies

By Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

In a massive press conference scheduled for Sunday afternoon, popular hip-hop artists Flo-Rida and Kanye West will offer their [somewhat] heartfelt apologies for their crimes against quintessential ballads "You Spin Me Right Round" (by Dead or Alive) and "Harder, Better, Faster, Stronger" (by electronic icon Daft Punk), respectively.

Why, you may ask? A petition written entirely in 3-D inks has been circulating the globe, acquiring signatures of 80s fans and elusive electronic fans, pleading the rap community to think about the reckless destruction of actual good music. Many claim that large portions of their souls shriveled up and died when they heard what Flo-Rida had done to "Right Round," turning it from a mildly suggestive song into an extremely suggestive song – such amplification of innuendo has set fire beneath people with sensitive wittle ears, awww.

The event is predicted to draw crowds of both hip-hop and classic hits fans, numbering into the hundreds. The petitioners have decided not to bring spoiled vegetables, but elected that forcing Mr. Flo-Rida to listen to Ben Folds' version of "Bitches Ain't Shit" would be sufficient for making the men share in everyone's pain.

"An eye for an eye," agreed several Michigan Tech students. "This is a tech school. We're not going to stand for this heartbreaking assault on geek music!"

The Daily Bull interviewed Flo-Rida about his feelings on the request for apology. He did not seem pleased, but was willing to mend the broken ties from other members of the musical community. He was not, however, eager to travel to Tallahassee to make amends with the state for "borrowing" its name – he claims that more people listen to his music than travel to the everglades, making him the rightful owner of the name.

As for Kanye, he will be lucky to escape unscathed for so brutally molesting Daft Punk's masterpiece – offended fans will most likely Robot Rock his ass all the way Around the World.

However, Mr. West operates under the assumption that what doesn't kill him makes him stronger, and the last thing the world needs is for him to come back and tear apart Interstella 5555 for his next video. Weighing these options in hand, it has been decided that the mere apology will be enough public humiliation for West.

Both West and Rida agreed that the latter was in the wrong to heinously remake Dead or Alive's only noteworthy song. "I am sorry for what I may have done to their reputation," he noted.

"A song that mindless, repetitive, and stereotypically bad did not deserve to be made even worse by me."

Dead or Alive refused to comment, but have threatened to release an old school remake of "In the Ayer," which would have the crowd dance in Aboriginal Australian style. Those who understood that joke get +5. Those that didn't, this will not be your jayum. Hot dayum. 🐾

Review: Frisbees

By Matt "Undercover Minority" Villa ~ Daily Bull

Frisbees. Yup, that's right, this week I'm reviewing frisbees. I won't go into explaining what a Frisbee is, because if you don't already know and you are attending this university, you must have been living under a rock and had been crushed to death due to your bad choice in shelter. I will however tell you how they came to be.

You see, college students were as bored with classes back in the late 1800's as they are now. The Frisbee Baking Company (real name, this is not made up I assure you) of Bridgeport, Connecticut used to sell pies to New England college students. The students would then realize that, other than throwing away or making a bong out of the leftover pie tins, they could throw them and catch them, first starting the game of frisbee. Well, sadly enough, it took till 1948 for some L.A. Building inspector to invent the design for the plastic ones we know and love today. Yep, some guy who looks at buildings to make sure they won't crumble got up one day and said, "Hey, you know what, I'm gonna make something that resembles a pie tin out of plastic so I can sell it to college kids! Surely THAT will keep me from drinking myself into a coma."

Enough about the history, lets get into the uses. The Frisbee is probably the most versatile and enjoyable thing made out of plastic, ever (Well, there are other things, but those are mostly silicon nowadays). If you've gone outside your room since you've been here (CS Majors, pay attention, this is what you're missing), then you know that you can pretty much improve upon

ANY major sport by inserting a frisbee. Hockey? Fuck that shit, play some Frisbockey. Golf? What are you, a WASP? Get ya'self some muthafuckin Disc Golf. Football? What are you, queer? (And if you are, what are you, Canadian?) Time for some Ultimate Frisbee. HOLY SHIT, that's right, it is so much better than football, the only way to describe it is as the Ultimate version of any frisbee sport.

Hell, even your dog can join in. For some unknown reason, dogs love the shit out of these circular pieces of plastic. I mean, try it, even if your dog has never seen a frisbee in his life, bring one around him, and his instincts will tell him it's game time. Big dogs, small dogs, even snow cows love frisbees.

So in conclusion, go get a frisbee, because anyone who already owns one knows that it blows being the only person in a mile radius with a working frisbee, so then everyone wants to borrow it, because it's just bad ass. 🐾

Oh, and those "tears" he is crying don't really seem to be tears at all. I say this is from a deep fear of crying; maybe a fear of messing up his makeup? Perhaps he had a botched plastic surgery procedure that fucked up his tear ducts, or it just stems from growing up in a conservative household. Whatever it is, it needs to stop. What he needs to do is A) grow a pair, and B) cut the bullshit and let the tears flow because this fake "crying" isn't fooling anybody, except for possibly those who attend those godforsaken "tea parties." The kind where one can view signs proclaiming "We didn't bring guns... THIS TIME!"

crazy ass theories on just about anything or the way he can take any average American and morph him/her into an extremist, Glenn has a better grasp of his viewers than most would believe. Although this seems like a profound statement there is much to back this up. Glenn was quite influential in the formation of the Washington Tea Party where "tens of thousands of people" (or 1.7 million people if you're Glenn) gathered to play the usual republican blame game, much of which came with arguments provided on his show. Although he wouldn't be the one to tell you, Glenn's show is downright propaganda.

2: Scare People. Whether it is his 3: Be a Fascist. Glenn Beck is a Fascist. There, I said it. Boy wasn't that easy, now I understand how he can easily throw around the word "communist." But unlike Glenn, who never has a viable shred of evidence to back up his claims whenever he declares a politician, such as Barrack Obama, to be a "communist," I have actually have some evidence to back up my claim.

A) His irrational fear of "communists." For whatever reason Glenn contains this irrational fear of alleged "communists." I put the word "communists" in quotations as to not confuse the reader from real communists. Those... who actually believe in Marxist theology.

B) His absolute LOVE of nationalism.

Glenn Beck "loves" America. He also loves the idea of destroying all those who don't even when the evidence just isn't there. I mean this man, if you can even call him that, actually believes that we found weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. But he also believes that the only reason we went to Iraq in the first place was to get to Iran or what he calls "the head of the snake and the center of evil in the modern world." Now I don't necessarily agree with a lot of Iranian policies or politics, but being a rational person, I must say I can't see any reason to go to war with Iran, or even Iraq for that matter.

All I know is this: Glenn Beck needs to be taken off of the air. 🐾
