Hey Look! Swine Flew!

By Jon "Big-O" Mahan
~ Daily Bull ~

Now, many all of you have heard of the recent scare in regards to swine flu. Many people freaked out and panicked and couldn't even think straight at the thought of being infected by the 'deadly' disease. But recently the US government has released a 'vaccine' for the pandemic. Yes people, the lovely new vaccine will cure you of all your ails! Government to the rescue!

But fear for your lives, citizens of Houghton. Oh yes, fear for your lives, for the side effects are much worse than the virus itself. Swine flu could just as easily be fought with orange juice and sleep, however, as a new 'nuke' against the contagion, a.k.a. the government's shot, has 'unforeseen' consequences.

The first consequence is an

President Obama Gets Schooled

By Sam Schall ~ Daily Bull

As we have all seen through internet ads and spam emails, President Obama is encouraging everyone to get a college degree, and we have several celebrities listening to this request, such as Emma Watson going to Brown. So, even with all this encouragement from the government, we still have several grown adults without college degrees. Therefore, President Obama made the following address to the country on Wednesday October the 7th 2009;

"In today's economy, we must realize working is what will get us out the economic downfall we are currently in. With the lack of college degrees in some of our families, the families who are suffering most in this down spiral, we must encourage more at-home mothers and fathers and the unemployed to go back to school and get their college degree. While we realize this, these families feel they cannot while they provide for their families at home. We have decided that we need change in this matter.

Therefore, starting spring semester of the college academic year 2010, I will set an example for all these families by attending an undisclosed university AND running this country, successfully."

While President Barack Obama and his Cabinet refused to comment about the university he would be attending, from an exclusive and undisclosed source, I have uncovered the university and program of study that the president will be studying.

Yes, President Barack will be attending Michigan Technological University in the School of Business and Economics, majoring in Economics. The president's plan is to study on campus while commuting to campus from a secure location on the Upper Peninsula. Although the Secret Service accompanying the

When Popularity Kicks the Crap Out of Education

By Mary Kennedy ~ Daily Bull

As many of you are now well aware, President Barack Obama has won the 2009 Nobel Peace Prize for "raising global awareness"...Huh? Polls taken in different countries after Obama was elected showed a marked improvement in the way they view America, and Obama has met with several country leaders to discuss policy and peace, and this seems to be plenty enough to win a fledgling President the Nobel Peace Prize. What the Nobel Committee means to say is "Sorry kids, America's popularity in the world is more valuable than your education." By this I mean, Greg Mortenson was shafted.

For those of you who don't know, Greg Mortenson has spent over fifteen years finding a way to build schools in impoverished areas of the Middle East (primarily in Pakistan). He has done so in order for children to grow up aware of the world, and not become victim to their societal circumstances, especially young girls. He was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize as well, but apparently years of dedication to educating youths are no comparison to America's popularity. And he is not the only victim of this battle.

"No child left behind" was enacted in 2002 by the Bush Administration, aiming to improve the educational system. But, it sucks quite a bit of ass. Here's what they were probably thinking:

President will be reduced to a handful of agents, because not all would fit into the classroom with the President and the undergraduates in attendance, the full Secret Service command will be on campus, some in disguise and some in uniform. The Secret Service will be taking volunteers from the student body to join in the security and encourage those in the ROTC programs to volunteer. There will be criminal checks and such other exams to select from the group.

For security reasons, new policies will be enforced while the President is on campus. The first is that all Computer Science and Computer Engineering majors will be secured by Secret Service agents at times while they are not in their dorm rooms, entailing group or personal escorts to classes, team meetings, and other mandatory events on or off campus. This also includes trips to Wal-Mart. These measures are to ensure no troublemakers with advanced technologies threaten the safety and well being of the President while he is here. The Secret Service does not mean to discriminate these two majors, but they feel this is for the better of the President, and by extension, the country. They apologize to all for the inconvenience ahead of time.

Also, all students will be forced to carry their I.D. cards on their person at all times. While we all already do so, the entrances for all buildings will be locked to those without them, including the front doors of dorms for 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for the entirety of the time that the President remains a student on campus. Therefore, if you forget your I.D. on the way to class and you're late, you're going to be later. The President will be at an assembly at the beginning of the Spring 2010 semester. He will be addressing the entire school and the country, so it is asked that you do not wear Michigan Tech clothing during the assembly. While this would show good school spirit, this could jeopardize the safety of the school and the President. Anything seen will be confiscated until it is picked up in Public Safety.

We will be periodically updating on this matter for the rest of the Fall 2009 semester. The school will be sending out full policies to all students in the near future, along with contracts to every person on campus. These will need to be read and signed. The aforementioned majors will be contacted by Public Safety and the Secret Service about their schedules and escorts for the Spring 2010 semester.

We thank you for your cooperation in this matter. Be on your best behavior for that semester and we will get it over will quickly. Thank you. ☺ undying loyalty to Obama. Scientists are at a loss as to how the government did this, but some how, the shot knocks out the logical part of the brain, and replaces it with the word "change". X-rays have shown the word appearing on many brains given the shot, and all logical thought is gone. Their eyes glaze over, and they have an uncanny likelihood to call anyone whom disagrees with Obama a racist, even if the person disagreeing is blacker than Obama is.

The second side effect to the shot is a fettering support for totalitarianism. More government control over everything. Since the government is so good, and has provided for us this wonderful shot, why not let them control everything!? They seem to be doing a crackerjack job as it is! We should give them MORE power! Just look at the amazing job they've done with Health Care, Medicare, Welfare, and the post office! Where would we be without the amazing job the government has done on those marvels of modern society!

It is unclear as to whether these effects were planned or not, or if they were simply a spurious correlation. It is unknown if the people whom received the shot were already clamoring for more government control and soaking up every minute of Obama, or if all 9001 people that "The nation's children are not as smart as the children of other nations. Let's kick them in the face and give our children the benefit of our knowledge, and then we'll be awesome."

Yeah, no. In reality, the government-designed standardized testing and teaching requirements leave a lot to be desired. Most of the politicians are not teachers, and have no idea what is going on in the classroom, and no idea what information will be relevant in the future. And since they cram all the boring information into the teaching standards, the teachers have little time to teach some of the more interesting aspects and the children often stop liking class, and also stop paying attention (you all know what happens when a class bores you, as you sleep through it or do a Searcher). Maybe the government should spend a little time in the classroom, and then they might get the idea.

Even college students are affected by the government's desire to be popular. Remember the stimulus plan? As a big platform for improving the economy, President Obama and Congress decided to pass the $700 billion stimulus package. Not long after, loan companies decided to only accept your left leg and first born as collateral. Now, the stimulus plan did earmark about $100 billion to education, but the majority of it, for higher education, goes towards government grants. For those of you in impoverished conditions, this is pretty good news. For the rest of us, hell hath been brought upon us. Our families all make too much money and couldn't possibly need extra help to send us to school.

Now, all of these examples have their exceptions, but these are as I described "EXCEPTIONS" and not the norm. What it boils down to is this: The government is an unpopular girl in high school, with out-of-date clothing and last year's hair. In order to get the boys, she dresses herself up all pretty, promises favors, and winds up forgetting her studies because she's too busy trying to fit into the "in" crowd. Why doesn't the government just grow up, realize she'll be making more money than them later in life, and get cracking on those textbooks? That would be too easy. ☺ actually got the shot were already fervent supporters, lacking any logic up my nose into my brain.

I don't know about you Huskies, but personally I like being able to think for my own, and think logically. I also think that this sudden magic vaccine is a bit rushed. Remember the last time a vaccine was rushed? More people died of complications than died of the actual flu! So remember that when you're getting your indoctrination, err, immunization shot. And as always, All Glory to the Hypnotoad. ☺
