"I was walking down the street with my friend and he said 'I hear music,' as though there's any other way to take it in [...] I tried to taste it, but it did not work."

Bathrooms

So I have determined that being able to look the person who just shat in the stall you are entering in the eyes is creepy. There are just too many images that come to mind when you actually see the person who leaves the floating log for you in the shining porcelain bowl of relief.

This unfortunately happened to me while I was in a Cabelas bathroom. After flushing down aforementioned log, (which if I was the dude from Swamp Loggers on Discovery might have been a hard task to do after appraising the value of the log) I attempted to finish my mission. After about thirty seconds of sitting there, I just had to leave. Traveling down the road for another 40 miles while trying not to kill the others in the car was enough time for me to realize that I now hate public restrooms.

What a Twist!

By Mary Kennedy ~ Daily Bull

As we all know, M. Night Shymalan has been giving good stories the shaft for years now. With him trying his hand at The Last Airbender, a potential blockbuster, I decided to take a look at how some other popular movies may have differed if he had been the director.

Lord of the Rings: It turns out that the moment after everyone has finished celebrating the destruction of the "one ring" some unknown douchebag actually has the real ring and the Fellowship accomplished nothing.

Every romantic comedy known to man: During the final scene, where the two main characters are supposed to have their touching reunion, one of them wakes up and realizes it was only a sad, desperate dream... oh, and they have tons of cats.

Or, in a terrible cross-over, Frodo wears yellow and lives in a village that is afraid of giant porcupines. Sam has to guide him to Mount Doom, which actually is taken over by some lady in the water. Or so.

Star Trek: Spock is just a figment of Kirk's imagination. Or vice versa.

The Rocky Horror Picture Show: Somehow, Shymalan makes this movie even more confusing. I don't know how he would do it, but he would find a way.

Batman: Bruce Wayne was never rich, never Batman and is a just raving homeless loon on the side of the street.

Congo: The crazy psycho apes come back to kill the rest of the crew and take over the world. Also known as Planet of the Apes by Tim Burton. (Such a good movie, but what a bullshit ending.)

Mrs. Doubtfire: Robin Williams was never the kids' father, just a deranged man who liked to pretend he was a British nanny.

So what happens on clouds 1-8?

 Alright, so those all seem fairly generic to Shymalan's style, but what about movies he could have improved upon?

Avatar: Anything would have made the plotline of this movie suck less. Whoohoo, special effects and absolutely no thought process at all in the plotline. I think I would have liked to see the plants kill everyone or water melt the Na'vi, or something to end the monotony.

Superman Returns: Oh man, could this film have been scrapped and redone from the ground up. I have always found Superman to be a bit clean-cut for my taste, but I had hopes for the modern vision and went to see it. I wanted to throw up every two seconds. Each tiny detail was so cliché, I thought I was reading eighth grade Superman fanfiction. Superman and Lois Lane do not have a kid, and damned if the guy is going to look prettier than all the female characters combined. I think this could have done with the main protagonist actually being dead.

I am sure there are others to be added to both lists, but it is fair to say Shymalan is a director to only touch with a two-foot-long stick and hope not to get whacked for your efforts. I mean, come on, I was confused with the trailers for The Happening and was just as confused and much angrier when I left. My sincere hope is that he takes The Last Airbender and sticks with the story. If there is a surprise twist, myself and all the other angry fangirls will certainly make sure that never happens again. 🐻

- gasp! What is that?
 - I think... it's a plot.
 - Oh God. SHOOT IT!!!

The kicker of the case was, _____-SAME MALE and _____-SAME FEMALE were _____-KIND OF RELATIVE.

Liz's DIARY: HOUGHTON WEATHER by Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

As anyone with at least one functioning eye and a few still-active sensory nerves well knows, it's been a freakishly warm winter here in the Keweenaw. I know, I know - no 'pow' means no 'sesh' and that 'sucks.' No snow leads to a lot of UP die hards wanting to die from lack of snowmen, snowangels, snowshoeing, snow fort building, snow eating, and snow so on. I'm very sorry for your suffering, but you'll survive.

Now, me? I'm a heathen. I love the warm weather. I enjoy passtimes that work better without ice and snow and blowing frigid death. Frisbee, for example. Soccer. Walking along the water under a blue sky, looking to my right and feeling like I swallowed a bowl of butterflies. You can bike when it's warm out! You can walk puppies. Reading in the sunshine, listening to happy music. See? Life without snow isn't all that bad, kids. I can't wait for shorts weather to be official. I am so pasty.

Nonetheless, I would appreciate it if winter would get its damn act together by next year. The broomball rinks were absolute shit this season, and I for one would like to actually play broomball rather than field hockey next time!! If the weather doesn't improve next time, I'll probably end up blaming IRHC. I got in trouble last time I did that... 🐻

O HI THERE MR HUMAN MAN.
 Do you have some funny pictures in this tube thing that the Daily Bull should print for everyone's enjoyment? WELL WHY ARE YOU HOARDING THEM? Jeez! If you were a good person you would send them to BULL@MTU.EDU so that we can include them in print or on our website: THEBULL.STUDENTS.MTU.EDU. Also, if your cat tries to eat me again, I'll bury HIS nuts.
