States Considering Lessening Charges Against Sexting

By Tyler Botbyl ~ Daily Bull

What the hell is this crap! America isn't going to hell hand basket- more like a paper bag. It has been recently found that about 20% of students in America are sending nude picture of themselves to other students. Really? Now you may not agree with me and say, "Well it's my 15 year old body and I can show it to whoever I like," but if you actually said this to yourself, you are stupid.

I mean, where are our morals now? I know that people do it and that many of the readers of this article may have done so. Especially since this is Michigan Tech, so it was probably in blu-ray, but anyway. Kids should not be doing this. I know if I were a parent of a teenage daughter, I would not want to have naked pictures of her all over the neighborhood. The idea of some punk kid sending them on the internet and my

Women are Evil (A Guide to Understanding Us)

By Mary Kennedy ~ Daily Bull

By all accounts, women have many strange habits that have been confusing males since the dawn of time. Why do we do these things? Because we are evil. Certainly not all are intentional, but they happen nonetheless. I present to you, the many poor males of Michigan Tech, a brief guide to understanding how we work.

We Notice Everything.

We are very insecure creatures by nature and always try to improve the way we appear to the world. That being said, any male who does not point out these improvements is doomed for failure. Whenever we get our hair done, even if it's just a few inches shorter, we want people to take notice. But, surprisingly, this is the largest of details that can be easily spotted by a man. Several other, seemingly mundane, details should be noticed as well.

We buy new clothing and are always excited the first day we get to wear the clothing in public. If no one notices, especially our boyfriends or prospective male buddies, we get quite miffed. The whole point of new clothing is to get complimented and noticed: we did not buy the form-fitted top just because we wanted to. (Well, not necessarily true, but even then you had better take notice.) Other details, such as jewelry and nail polish can also get you a pissed-off woman if you overlook them. I know men tend to not worry about such things, but you should start to.

We Almost Never Mean What We Say.

"Sure" is not the same thing as "yes." To any question you ask of a woman, "sure" is our way of saying "If we feel like it or have the time, we will consider it." "Sure" does not mean jack. "Hey, you want to go grab some coffee some time?" "Sure." Next thing you know, she is canceling the next time you talk to her, mentioning some vague thing she forgot about and getting away from you as

... Lilith from front quickly as possible.

We have this little word to confuse and annoy the hell out of men, just because we can. We are very flirtatious (to be discussed in the next section) and do not like to say no right away. This word allows us to consider our options more carefully before committing further. Now, there will be times when "sure" turns into "yes," but be forewarned that nothing is definite until it does.

"Fine" is the other word of doom. On occasion, this word means exactly what it is intended to mean, like when discussing a class or a book, or someone object of minor importance. The time to take warning, however, is when asking about something you gave them or did with them. "How did you like the movie?" or "How were my dance moves?" If we answer "fine" to any similar questions, the real answer is most definitely not fine. And, most men know this. The thing they do not realize, however, is that we use it as a subtle curse on whatever it was we did not like. We know you know it does not mean "fine" but we use it to force you to rectify the situation without us seeming like bitches. There is a reason we are evil.

We Love to Flirt. Single, taken, it does not matter. We love to flirt, and often there is no intention behind it. The idea of flirting is fun to us, and we revel in the chase. We will purposefully dress cute in order to draw male attention, and you males had better fall in line if you want to catch one of us. Be careful, however, because you never know if the chase is real or false. Show interest and be mindful of your eyes (we love to accentuate our interesting bits in order for them to be ogled, but never do so blatantly or you will be out of luck). Flirting also is a very informative way to get to know someone: we will flirt with men who we want to be friends with. Chances are, if you find yourself friend-zoned, you started out that way to begin with.

So, needless to say, we women are quite evil and know we are as such. If you take heed of the information provided here, you may catch yourself one of the rare creatures known as "woman" yet. 🐾

Talk about having a sugar momma!

MAD LIB 1: The Concert Brought to you by Nathan "Invincible" Miller

As darkness fell upon the massive crowd that had gathered, _____(artist) ran out on stage. "Are you guys ready to _____(verb)!?" They shouted, throwing the crowd into a(n) _____(adj) fervor. Jamming hard on their Fender Strato _____(noun), riffs blasted across the masses, rupturing their _____(body parts) and all bootleg recording gear. "I hope you're ready for this one- I call it The _____(past tense verb) _____(nationality)!" the artist screamed, before erupting into another _____(adj 2) solo. While hundreds died, those who _____(past tense verb 2), survived to tell the tale.

Zomg, Hamsters beat me at vidygames. OH NOES.

... Felatilol from front buddies being able to view them is not a very good thought.

Now it's bad enough that America has become so sex driven. It is causing us problems where we shouldn't have them. Society cannot handle all the new changes, and it's evident that the government is going in the wrong direction with this. It seems like America really doesn't care anymore about what we do. We have high sexual assault statistics in college women, high teen pregnancy, no one has money to pay the medical bills of all these accidental children, and now the government wants to just slap these kids on the wrist for behavior that will eventually lead to things that may affect everyone in terms of healthcare and safety.

So Michigan Tech, I encourage you to please not let your kids sext, especially while driving. 🐾
