It's About Time!!

By Alec Hamer ~ Daily Bull

I don't know if you are aware, but last week a piece of landmark legislation went through a Colorado court of appeals concerning the use of conceal and carry weapons. Conceal and carry, for those of you not well acquainted with the wonderful world of guns, is the government granted ability to conceal and carry a gun. In other words: awesome.

What happened is a ruling was made that will now allow students at the University of Colorado to conceal and carry. Whoa. Now, a lot of you crazy, hippy liberals are probably crying foul. "Who needs a gun on campus?" "Why do they need guns if pot is nearly legal?" "What is there to be afraid of in Colorado?" These are all valid questions if you like to hug trees. You see, shooting shit is fun. God invented the pistol so that man could not only shoot his fellow man but also shoot other stuff.

Daily Bull <3 Pi

By Liz Fujita and Nathan Invincible ~ Daily Bull

For those who did not get a chance to enjoy the "oh-so beautiful" weather on Friday, allow us to explain.

Under the cover of darkness and imminent bad weather, the Daily Bull left a coded message all across campus. It was recognizable only to the wisest: 3.141592653... thousands of digits of Pi wound from Walker, past Fisher/DOW/EERC, and to the Library, while a similar number stretched from just past the MUB. We crawled and scrawled with chalk for nearly two hours, muttering like crazy people on a mission.

Mother nature, in typical Houghton fashion, decided to put our geeky little organization into time-out. She blustered and rained all over our hard work, wiping out nearly half the digits we had worked so hard to display. In a heroic act, however, the EERC tree cast a loving umbrella over our basic message: "THE DAILY BULL LIKES PI AND THE EERC TREE." That's dedication.

Scattered among the 1400 or so numbers were also important subliminal messages. "Sonic says read the Daily Bull!" "Now with more daily!" But what did the serpentine path of irrationality mean? Careful followers may have noticed that the two pi paths met in front of the library, where several Bull staff members gave away... free cookies!

Yep. Free! More than 300 of them, in fact. Some people were doubtful – "What do I have to do for it?" Oh, you cynic. We didn't even make 'em do something stupid or embarrassing. We just suffered in the gale-force, bitter-cold winds so that other people could have a better day! Aren't we loving?

Anyway, 100% genuine, arsenic-free cookies were given to the willing by the droves. For those who were left wanting more, we had an extra challenge: guess how many calories were in the $53 of cookies we bought for a chance to win FREE P(CE)!

And now the great mystery of Daily Bull Loves 3.14 is revealed. Ta-da!

For such a crappy day, we had an impressive 92 guesses. Ranging from 800 to 117 million, the average for the normal guesses was 57,802 Calories. Sorry Rob Halwani, Bullshit+1 isn't quite correct. The right answer turned out to be 38,440. Here are the winners!

In third place, off by a mere 914, was Joseph Supinsky! He wins a small apple pie, not even big enough to smash into someone's face. NONE-THELESS DELICIOUS AND FREE!

We then had a tie for first place. Both James Clevenger and Tony Stromer were a mere 560 off, so we decided to have a head-to-head, "Guess the calories in the pies" competition, since they're the best calorie estimators on campus. Turns out we didn't need to! James and Tony live together and decided to share the pies. Mmmm, Pumpkin-cherry pies. Thanks for playing everyone! Tune in next year for more awesome giveaways.🍷

The Epiphany Waffle

By Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

For all the horrible things we say about dorm food around here, there are actually some noticeable pros: eternal cereal, Mountain Dew Code Red, and stir fry come to mind. Less appreciated, however, is the simple heated-batter and tree-blood breakfast – waffles.

I was having a particularly depressing, dreary week about a month ago. Looking for some kind of fresh start to my day, I ladled some tan goop into a fancy griddle, shut the lid, and listened to it sizzle up a waffle. I got steadily more depressed as I remembered that I forgot to spray the waffle iron, leaving the poor thing defenseless to burns and scorches.

Beep. When I pulled out the waffle, it

It was raggedy and half-stuck to the iron. Great. But you know what, Michigan Tech? I sat down, I ate, I thought... and I had epiphanies.

All my personal troubles, gone! Every worry about finishing mountains of homework, poof! The tired and vampire-esque bloodshot eyes paled back to white. The epiphany waffle had spoken!!

It was like Yoda – just lurking there on my plate, swamping around in syrup. But it held all the wisdom of the world! I could cure cancer if I ate an epiphany waffle every morning! Even my cannibalistic fish pet from last year could have been set right had he nibbled a corner of a crispy golden chunk of batter.

Now just imagine the possibilities if I remembered to spray the iron before cooking. Woah.🍷

Having a gun on campus would be AWE-SOME!!

Think about it. You are sitting in your major's computer lab. All of a sudden your essay for World Cultures takes a shit on you. Oh what to do!?! Well, if you're lucky enough and fortunate enough to be attending University of Colorado, you could pull out your gun and "shoot the damn thing." I'm sure computer problems would drop considerably if this started happening on a regular basis. I hear the IT department doesn't like finding bullet holes in the sides of computers.

Also, you could use it as a prop like old men do in western films. You know, you say some sort of corny line like "this town ain't big enough for the two us" or "you're the man now, dog" and then draw your gun. This isn't something the hippies will like but unfortunately they'll just have to deal. If things were my way... everyone would carry a gun.

Think! No one would pull a gun because a gun would be pulled on him or her. No one would commit crimes anymore because if they did, they would be shot. If everyone had a gun, there would be an end to shootings, as we know it. What a beautiful world full of bullets.🍷
