Now I'm sure all of you are familiar with Facebook's friend finder option. Through various means and what-nots, you can find a friend on Facebook pretty quickly. It's actually a very useful thing to have. I know from experience, because I found an old friend I hadn't seen since fourth grade on Facebook, and we're now back in touch. Good times indeed. But have you ever seen some of your suggested friends, that Facebook's magical formula somehow manages to find?

We all get those random guys. For instance, there's a man, he's a biker and part of the Patriot riders (if you don't know who they are, look them up. Pretty cool dudes) and many other similar organizations. Yeah okay Facebook, so the dude is chill and has 2500+ friends on Facebook. So what? He's like 20 years older than me. But that's not the point of this article. See,

Obligatory Sappy Closing Article

By Nathan "Invincible" Miller ~ Daily Bull

Well, it's the end of the year and for the first time since I've joined, I'm not surprised the Daily Bull is still around. At 5 days a week for the entire semester, we're practically excelling! Amazing! Unfortunately for me, I won't be around to bask in our glory, as I'll be departing for U of Albany to get a Masters in how not to design traffic nightmares like the Yooper Loop - a.k.a. Urban & Regional Planning.

Since this may well be the final article I'll write while at Tech, I'd like to take a moment to look back at all the things that made the first 4 years of my college experience so swell. Feel free to visit the powder room to dry your eyes if the sappiness is too much.

For starters, writing for and commanding the Bull was pretty darn awesome. Not only did I get to be a part of something that tons of people read across campus, I got to save us from the brink of extinction and vault us into further glory. We're almost completely upgraded, are 5 days, have a website, shirts, members who write, and tons of other awesome going our way. It's sweet to think that I was right there in the thick of it, helping make the magic happen.

Working with the Bull has also meant I've gotten to enjoy one of my favorite parts of the Keweenaw: Studio Pizza. Talk about delicious! I'm really going to miss it when I leave. Maybe they can put it on dry ice and ship me some... It'd be totally worth it.

My #2 favorite recreational activity was playing awesome electronic music on WMTU. Whether anyone aside from the Old Geezer was listening didn't matter. I was on the radio, throwing down the phat beats and saying silly things on air to the entertainment of myself and whoever decided to tune in. As an added bonus, I got to greatly increase my music collection. When I came here, I had maybe 50 electronic songs to my name. That's ballooned to over 5000, with hundreds more listened to every week. I feel like a guru!

I made a lot of good friends while I was at Tech, but probably one of my closest was the open road. Yes, I gotta feel for my automobile; on long trips to Texas and back, we forged a strong bond that made us inseparable. So far the longest I've driven in one non-stop trip was 968 miles. That's likely to increase since Albany is over 1000 miles from here, and I've still got a very good reason for coming back to visit.

... So Long from front.

I've taken my fair share of classes here, and I'd have to say that classes with cool professors made the difference. Among my favorites were Terry Reynolds, Carl Dassbach, and Nathan Carpenter. They often made entire semesters worthwhile with their awesome teaching and hilarious asides.

I also enjoyed interacting with student activities folks, Rachel Wussow in particular. They're a hoot over there. Carol Janisse the Student Org secretary/dynamo also made every day worthwhile by helping out whenever I'd have random questions about how to fix up the Bull.

It'll be nice to have a change of pace though, since one can only survive in Houghton so long. Albany's only a few hours from NYC and the rest of the East Coast, so yet again I'll be in for a culture shock by moving to somewhere in proximity to millions of people rather than trees. Whether I'll actually be able to start up a Daily Bull franchise is still up in the air. You'll just have to tune in next year to find out. Thanks for reading and supporting the Bull, and remember, never take yourself too seriously — you're just a big joke like everyone else. ☺

Little known fact: the JR Van Pelt library will soon have an updated study area. Well, kind of. Students who enjoy Buddhist rock gardens can expect a surprise when they enter the third floor quiet study lounge to find shelves and shelves of... rock samples, courtesy of the AE Seaman Mineral Museum. Seriously.

...Le book d'stalker from front

That's just a jump Facebook makes to say, Hey! You would like this guy, be friends!

What's REALLY creeper is when you get friends suggested to you, that you have NO idea how Facebook knows them. Little background on this, I used to go to forums religiously. I subscribed to 5 forums that I checked and posted on daily. I was addicted to forums. Well surely enough, one by one they died (most of them were small), and everyone more or less went their own way. So I'm on Facebook one day, and this suggested friend comes up. I pay it no creed, and as I mouse over the x button to remove it, I stop.

No way... Turns out, somehow, Facebook went way back into a forum I hadn't been on since I was like 15, found this girl that I used to have heated discussions with, found her Facebook in THE NETHERLANDS and suggested that we be friends. What in the holy hell. How the hell did you do that Facebook!? What are you doing in my past!?

That's not the only time. Same thing happened later on. I was sitting there, looking at my friend suggestions, and another came up. See, I have a Deviant Art, and I've often commissioned artists to do art for me. I was sitting on Facebook looking at my friend suggestions, and I'm like... she's cute. So I click her link (because Facebook creeped her to me), and I literally jaw drop. It literally found one of my favorite artist's Facebooks, and mind you, I use a completely different email for both accounts. By all means, the internet would think they were unrelated. Seriously, how did it do that. I'm like, mind status BLOWN! And long story short, Facebook is the creeper. I mean, how much of my life does it have cataloged now? I'm still waiting for it to find the people I WANT it to find though... Funny how that works, isn't it? "Here's your main debating opponent from 3 years ago! But no, you can't have your main accomplice." ☹

The sarcastic italics of doom don't lie. Out of concern for students who long to see nature during the long winter months, the museum will be there for probably two to three years ("temporary!"). UGH!

So, basically, those who enjoy studying while surrounded by shelves of million-year old geology are in luck. The rest of us are just confused. And no, don't worry, you weren't supposed to have say in it. Personally, I'm hoping that if the Mineral Museum gets to take up part of the 3rd floor study lounge, then the biology department gets to install a 4,000-gallon aquarium in Fisher 135. ~ The Seeker ☹
