

INVINCIBLE BULL

The Daily Bull is probably not suitable for those under age 18 and should not be taken seriously... like graduating!

UC's Top 5: Nathan Invincible

By Matt 'Undercover Minority'
Villa ~ Daily Bull

So time has come again for another great to walk through the halls of Daily Bull history. While we can't halt his progression and keep him here forever as the heart of the Bull, we can look back at our glorious friend and colleague and think of the top five reasons Nathan is so freakin' awesome.

#5 The Hair. Chances are if you have been around for the last three years, you have seen a man made of pure awesome with a hair do as bright and colorful as any parade could ever hope to be. His hair is so amazing in fact, that the only reason he un-dyed it for his interviews was so that he wouldn't blow the minds of his recruiters, impairing their judgment beyond repair.

#4 The Mind. Unbeknownst to most readers, many of the ideas for social functions and what to do with our funding comes from Nathan himself. In his impending absence, we the writers and the next Editor-in-chief will have to...see MILLER TIME me on back

Invincible Saves Puppies From Kraken

By Frank McGuire ~ Daily Bull

So, as you now know our reigning Editor-in-Chief/Bossman Mr. Nathan "Invincible" Miller is going to be leaving our presence. If you have not yet felt the wave of grief that is radiating from the Bull, you will soon.

When I came here oh-those-long-years-ago, I heard of this Daily Bull, at first I was like "meh" whatever... and then I began to read. The rest is history. Article after article Invincible refused to bow down to the naysayers who said it was not possible... just like that one time he saved 13 puppies and some cats.

I was just strolling along campus one day when all of a sudden I heard a bunch of yipping and yapping. Attracted by the lovely sound of puppies I followed the sound until I came across a group of them playing down by the water. I was going to go play with them when all of a sudden the calm water erupted into a massive spray as the Lake Superior Kraken sprung from its hiding place to devour yummy puppies.

As I stared in stunned silence, I saw a man jump over my head and dive into the whirlpool. I was sure that the Kraken was back to get me when all of a sudden, the man emerged from the depths, propelling a dead Kraken in front of him. As it hit the land he rushed over and, with his mighty piece of chalk, sliced into the belly of the defeated Kraken to pull out 10 puppies and one kitten that must have been a pre-puppy snack.

I was dumbfounded. With a ferocious roar

he leap 20 feet into the air and dove straight back into the water! Just as he was about to hit the surface another Kraken, twice as big, slammed into him and carried them both at least a hundred feet into the air. There was a mighty shriek, and the sky was covered in a red mist, quickly followed by a massive explosion of Kraken blood.

At that moment I saw two more cats and another puppy pop to the surface of the water and attempt to struggle for the shore. I rushed over to help them make it, because after what I had just witnessed these cute little balls of fur deserved not to drown. As I put them down the man leapt from the water, a puppy in one hand and a very beat up-looking dog under the other. The mother dog was in very bad shape so the man - with only a piece of baloney and very skilled hand - patched her up.

As he turned around I saw that he had been gravely wounded by the Kraken; at least a two-inch gash covered his entire abdomen. I said "Holy shit dude! Where the hell are you from? Are you alright?!" With a smile he pulled out two strips of duct tape, gathered up his split innards, stuffed them back in and taped the hole shut. With a final loving look to the puppies with their mother he ran up the hill with a final victory shout "INVINCIBLE!!!" and bounded away.

Little did I know what I had just met the one, the only, the fantastic Mr. Nathan "Invincible" Miller of the Daily Bull. 🐾

NATHAN INVINCIBLE, WE SALUTE YOU!

Nathan Wonders: Bohemia!

Brought to you by Nathan 'Invincible' Miller

No, not the ski hill you dunderheads, the awesome 19th century ideal of truth, beauty, freedom, and most importantly, love. Yes, I've been doing some thinking and it'd be pretty awesome to live like crazy Bohemians did back in the late 1800s. The world was new, the technology was changing, and creativity was running rampant. Stodginess!? A thing of the past my friends!

Maybe I've just watched Moulin Rouge a few too many times, but I think it's high time we have another Bohemian revolution. It'd be nice if it didn't include hippies, but that's beside the point. After 4 years with the Bull, I've discovered my own little Bohemian world, albeit without absinthe and fancy hats.

Truth, while in somewhat short supply around here sometimes, can be found if you look hard enough. We sometimes report on actual news around campus, and I've got an intimate understanding of how organization and management works. Beauty? It's a beautiful thing to see the Daily Bull grow out of the ashes! The Lode-killing phoenix rises again!

Creativity is everywhere you look in the Bull, especially considering we've got almost no guidelines of what you can or cannot do. The freedom to express myself however I please has been a mainstay of my life here. And finally, love. How could I ever forget! My love of the Bull has also brought me personal love, a love I'm grateful for every day. So here's to living life to the fullest and enjoying every minute of it as best you can - the Bohemian way!

... MILLER TIME from front

pick up the slack. Not to mention that when no one turns in their articles, Nathan is able to fill the empty space with entertaining articles, a talent that will be sorely missed.

#3 The Voice. Since I was a freshman, Nathan has always seemed to be the voice of the Bull.. Any chance to advertise? He was totally there. Need to talk to USG about funding? BOOM, he's your man. In fact, Nathan has ended the feud between us and USG, put forth olive branches to the Lode, and argued continuously to bring back office areas to the Student Org room in the MUB. Quite the accomplishments.

#2 The Chalk. If you've ever been to a Daily Bull meeting, or heard any of us talk about them, you know about the chalk. Nathan has quite a reputation for his pension for chucking chalk. In fact, I clocked his throw one day, and he made about 2 parsecs a second. Oh yea, it went through the wall, but we covered it up with old Lodes and paper mache, so I think we're good.

#1 The Man. Nathan has always been an awesome guy. Serious when he needed to be, but fun loving and with good humor through and through. We here at the Daily Bull will miss our former E-in-C, and wish him the best in the years to come. He's always welcome to come back to a meeting. ☹

WHAT A MAN, WHAT AN ANIMAL... by Alec Hamer ~ Daily Bull

...not to mention he is Invincible! I mean, look at the photos of him on Facebook! He's fucking ripped! Now, if you, the reader, are unlike me and have never had the fortune of meeting the man himself, Nathan 'Invincible' Miller, I do apologize. You have missed out on meeting possibly one of coolest and hardest working guys on campus.

"Coolest?!" you say, well let's just examine the evidence. He listens to awesome music. Now I know electronic music isn't for everyone, but good electronic music is. We're talking songs that make you can't help but get off your sorry ass and dance like there is no tomorrow. He is also hilarious. This guy is the funniest man I have met on campus, no exceptions. I can't help but crack up when talking with him.

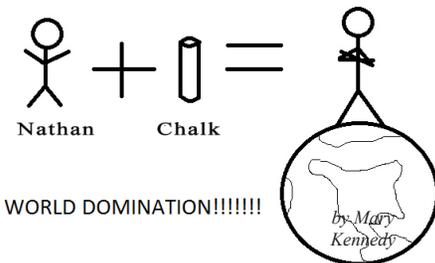

"All right, all right. He sounds like a cool guy but he isn't even an engineer. How could he possibly even work hard?" Well let's see. He took the Bull from something that ran maybe 2 times a week with articles mostly composed by him to a five day-a-week powerhouse. It's simple, everyone reads the Bull and I feel honored that Michigan Tech was graced with Nathan 'Invincible' Miller's presence. For if he didn't go here, it is very possible that The Daily Bull would no longer exist. ☹

Ok. Quick background of my experiences with Nate... pretty awesome guy. I'm only a first year, but working with him has been really fun. I was trying to plan coming back from Christmas break. I get on facebook, stressed and trying to find a ride from Green Bay's airport. Nate: "Well... I'm driving up through there."

And the offer was made. The epic-ness was shown when my planes were delayed and he waited three HOURS for me in Green Bay. He's allergic to wasting time and he waited for me because he is so epic. And when finally landing in Green Bay, he's ready to go. He tells me that I'm navigating. I don't think I fell asleep... much. In the end, we get safe and sound back to campus. And we agree I can pay him gas back later - which turned into me buying him

Jones Soda. I think Jones is his favorite way to get paid.

So, all in all, Nate is a pretty swell guy. He helps at the facebook's call. I know the Bull staff will miss him. Well, not so much the chalk throwing but definitely him. Good luck in the future, Mr. Invincible! ☹ ~Sam Schall, D.B.

The Legend

By Simon Mused ~ Daily Bull

A long, long time ago, in a galaxy far, far away named Pennsylvania, a child was born. Or rather, emerged triumphantly. Either way, the child grew and eventually found his way into Texas, the only state capable of holding his ego.

At the tender and impressionable age of 17, he enrolled at Michigan Tech, where he studied numerous ways to blow people's minds and the environment and stuff. This choice afflicted him with a permanent and incurable writer's diarrhea, an ailment so terrible his professors were scampering to create a letter above 'A' to satisfy him. The closest they ever came was double 'A', yet the man only laughed.

With the need for an outlet in mind, he set out to join an organization that could use his skills. The Lode proved too lame to allow his name to appear in that print. The Cross Reference didn't exist at the time, yet he would have retroactively refused them with some of his divine power. He then stumbled upon the Daily Bull, and found it good.

The organization was weak. Membership was limited to about 6-7 students, and the quality of articles were low. He saw potential, and dreamed of bringing the paper back to its former glory. Morale and productivity are at their highest in at least 5 years. He increased the number of days that the Bull was printed by 2, making the Bull live up to its own name for the first time ever.

Now graduating, the hero of this story can rest assured that his work shall not be forgotten, as he does the Hammer Dance in a mesh shirt and parachute pants straight into grad school. We only hope that they can handle him, and we wish them the best. ☹
