I think computer viruses should count as life. I think it says something about human nature that the only form of life we have created so far is purely destructive. We've created life in our own image.

Party and Bullshit

By Alec Hamer ~ Daily Bull

Have you ever been to a party and thought "this is such bullshit." Well I have. Either there aren't enough people or everyone (but yourself) is a douche bag or the energy just is not there. Well, two weekends ago a buddy of mine hosted a party and asked if I wanted to help and I said hell yeah! Here is what I learned:

When planning a party the first thing to consider is location. Obviously, depending on the party, you need room. If it's a party of three a dorm room will work but what kind of party is that? An apartment can work but if there are too many people shit can hit the fan. Houses are the best option - preferably one with a basement. More space = more fun! But be wary! A house party can turn into a house rager much quicker than you can ever

What They're Fighting For In...

Brought to you by Nathan Invincible Miller

By now you're all familiar with the plague-like uprisings taking place in North Africa and the Middle East. But you're probably not aware that people are rioting in other places as well! However, due to the small amounts of bloodshed, there has been little news coverage of these still-crucial revolts. Thus, it brings me great honor to bring you my first installment of "What They're Fighting For In..."

Londoners, UK-ers, and general citizens of Earth threw up their arms in protest when they realized the Telletubies had rigged the vote for the 2012 Olympic mascots.

New Zealand!

It's a well known fact that New Zealand has been pounded by earthquakes over the past few months. These aren't your random happenstances. Kiwis across the nation have been protesting Earth's efforts to further alienate their country from the rest of the world through so-called "tectonic plate movement."

Citing the lack of anything interesting out in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, New Zealanders took to the streets demanding to be reattached to the mainland. Earth responded with a volley of tremblers, completely destroying the city of Christchurch and killing scores. Man, for the moment, has been put in his place.

Chile! Following the conclusion of the harrowing rescue of the 33 miners from their would-be tomb, attention shifted to more pressing news stories across the globe. After months of being ignored, Chile has finally had enough. President Piñera called on his fellow Chileans to, "take up arms against the blind eye of the world," and to "follow the 33 in their courageous struggle for glory." Protesters were last seen marching en masse into the na-imagine. Not that that is a bad thing, just be cautious. Neighbors can be motherfuckers.

Next is timing. Weekend nights are best; no one wants to stay out late if they know they have class tomorrow. When planning the date ask around and see what's up. If you learn that someone is planning a bigger, better party the same night as yours, start an advertising campaign. They will back down eventually.

Great, now you have a place and time. Now you need entertainment! Depending on the event this can range from Boggle to category seventeen drugs. If you are planning to get alcohol, be cautious! Know the repercussions of serving minors. A good party is a prepared party. Know state and federal laws. Nothing feels better than knowing the law and exercising your rights.

WOOO TIME TO PARTY!!! On the night of the party do the following:

don't freak out if there are people you don't know there. If they are causing trouble fuck 'em; they can leave. If the cops show up use your head! YOU should be aware of the risk involved. When it starts approaching three and you're tired of partying make a last call. Just make sure if people are driving they are ok to do so. And with that... LET'S PARTY!!!!

[Editor's Note: also good to have at parties are things like crumpets, Scene It: Victorian England Architecture, a live string quartet, and a key-note speaker. College kids totally love those things.]

tion's mines waving flags and singing patriotic songs.

Greece! Being the riot party animal that it is, Greece is determined to be the #1 most unstable country in the world for the fifth straight year. With heavy competition from Egypt, Tunisia, and Libya, Greeks everywhere have been increasingly angry that the United Nations Protest Committee has even considered nominating other countries for the top spot.

"We're pissed that they haven't au-tomatically recognized us as the least satisfied nation on the planet!" shouted a group of rabble rousers in downtown Athens. "Just the thought that somebody thinks they've got more radical ideas than us makes me want to firebomb a pet store!" Greek politicians have enacted sweeping reforms to fuel the unrest, including requiring all underwear come in the wrong size and decorating police cars with anti-working class slogans and targets.

The UK! Londoners are in a stink over the 2012 Summer Olympic and Paralympic Mascots, Wenlock and Mandeville. The Capri-Sun Cyclopes were chosen for their complete lack of any recognizable features or resemblance to human beings. People around the nation are understandably ticked off.

"Wenlock and Mandeville!? What the? I don't even... What?!" said one bamboozled passerby. "I haven't seen anything so atrocious in my life. Who invented this crap? I demand a change of government!" Protests are scheduled every Tuesday and Thursday until a proper mascot with a huge head and is chosen.

Beyond the Bull: Yet Another View on the Career Fair

By Dylan Best ~ GUEST writer.

With another Career Fair dead and buried, it's time for some reflections on professional appearance and fashion.

Career Fair is great. It gives students the opportunity to work for companies in real-world setting and it allows said companies to get some cheap labor. But most importantly, Career Fair gives the budding engineers of Tech a chance to play dress-up and pretend that they are all grown up.

Meanwhile, those of us who know how to dress ourselves are forces to look on as droves of fashion-retarded job seekers embarrass themselves to a level beyond that of even public flatulency which, coincidentally, also turns off potential employers.

First of all, a collared shirt and a tie does not instantly make you a professional. Lots of people wear ties and collars, such as the fine men who work at Chippendales. For shit's sake, if you want to look good, spend the extra 30 seconds of your morning to tie a full Windsor. While you're at it, try NOT grabbing that wrinkled mess of a dress shirt from the bottomless crap pit that is your closet. Or, grab that shirt and use an iron on it. They come free in Monopoly boxes.

Secondly, we know you're an individual and you're proud of your uniqueness and you like to show it to the world, but the next douchebag I see walking to Career Fair with a faux-hawk and goatee will receive a People's Elbow to the chest so fierce that The Rock himself will smell what I am cooking. Companies don't care how cool you look. When was the last time you heard a hiring representative say, "Well, this guy has a solid 4.0 GPA, and he built a satellite in his garage that NASA is using to spy on North Korea. But that guy with the green-tipped faux-hawk is so badass... let's hire him."

So the next time Career Fair rolls around, try you're very best to not look like Stevie Wonder dresses you. Remember. The People's Elbow is waiting.

Look at this man and his faux hawk. how could you NOT hire that. He looks so professional.
