Pure Michigan

By Kyle Roe ~ Daily Bull

Michiganders rejoice this week as new state governor Rick Snyder passes his first bill into law, which is said to be the exact thing Michigan needs. "The bill that was passed will help the Michigan economy and improve our way of life in Michigan," said Republican spokeswoman Sussy Palpatine. "Under the legislation the governor could declare a "financial emergency" in towns or school districts. He could then appoint a financial manager to fire local elected officials, break contracts, seize and sell assets, eliminate services - and even eliminate whole cities or school districts without any public input."

Michigan could not be happier with the passing of this bill. The republican funded website of michigangovernment33.com showed that a staggering 98% of Michiganders voted for this bill to be passed. So far, the new law shows great promise and will most likely take the Michigan economy and government to a greater, higher, level.

Pandemic Sweeps Michigan Tech Campus

By Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

UPPER PENINSULA, MI – An epidemic has been taking over students across Michigan Tech's campus for the last several months. In what researchers declare "the worst cause for concern since the swine flu," hundreds of students have already been diagnosed and quarantined. A group of biology majors is developing new strategies to tackle the near-fatal illness, which renders male and female students alike spontaneously waist-less and unable to keep their pants pulled up.

The disease has a slower onset than many others; first, the waist briefly disappears. In the short amount of time (which is paralleled by fevers reaching up to 103 degrees F) that the waist line vanishes, the victim's pants begin to sag. Thinking little of it, the afflicted person allows the sagginess to remain. In no time at all, they reach the most lethal stage of their influenza-like pants problem: their buttcrack shows.

Unlike the regular flu, it's other people (not the victim) who begin to vomit.

"We've seen a lot of very severe cases," noted one nurse at the SDC branch of Portage Health. "It ranges from guys with a bit of sag to girls with full-on thong exposure." The worse, most helpless cases are alleged to be in male students, whose entire butt crack, butt cheeks, and buttocks-thigh-line are exposed. Due to the harsh winds in the Upper Peninsula, there is always a chance that they could experience severe frostbite of the ass.

In such cases, amputation may be necessary. Fortunately for the growing number of afflicted Huskies, an early detection squad has been formed to keep students safe from this terrible disease.

Third-year computer scientist Ruben Garcia is the leader of the new early detection task force. Their job is to keep their eyes open (even when bleeding) for the sight of sagging pants. "By the time the sagging starts," noted Garcia, "they have already gotten past the fever stage. They're about to go full-blown, dangerously ill." The team members alert students that in addition to increased frostbite risk, sufferers of the saggy pants syndrome are more likely to incur trip-related injuries, get pantsed, and get their belt loops stuck on things as they walk by.

"Our strategies for keeping pants-saggers from suffering such horrible fates are pretty varied," explained Garcia. "For some girls who are starting to reveal a lot of crackage, an overly creepy stare at their assular exposure will do." Saving the day has never been simpler, he insists.

"In advanced stages of the illness, however, we have to be more forceful. It's like the difference between the Tech posters advising students to wash their hands, and the sudden appearance of fourteen-billion hand sanitizer stations on campus," Garcia summarized. "So, if suddenly you see me screaming at you, PICK UP YOUR PANTS, please be aware that I am only looking out for your wellbeing." Daily Bull, coming to you live from Buttcheekistan, Michigan. 🐾

A very, very small few have asked if this legislation goes against the constitutional rights of Michigan citizens, however we could not get any statements from them. Our highly right winged reporter told us that when she tried to contact them, the "socialist, anti-American Nazis spat in our faces and limped away like the rabid and mutated beasts that they are." Besides those few, it seems unanimous that this new law, which gives the governor the right to appoint officers who have complete martial control, is greatly appreciated by the entire population.

One head of a local school board stated that, "I am quite glad that Snyder now has the power to completely change and even remove our wonderful school district. I feel safe in knowing that I have no say in whether my job is removed by some stranger who knows nothing about the area." The board head then stated that he absolutely loved the area's financial manager and quickly walked away with the three tough looking suited men who had been following him.

School districts are not the only institutions that will be improved by this new law. Republican State Senator Jack Brandenburg said a good number of urban areas in the state, notably Detroit, are in "bad shape" and require "financial martial law" to make them wonderful places to live. By appointing an emergency czar, he said, cities like Detroit would be under the rule of a leader with "a strong backbone, who would have the power to null and void any contract that he sees fit." This would include completely wiping out entire cities. For example an appointed "financial manager" czar could declare Detroit unfit, financially, as a city. This would have it completely evacuated and scheduled to be leveled to make way for more profitable farm land. In a final statement Brandenburg said "I'll tell you what, I think that in a lot of these places there is no control."

It has been made quite apparent that this new law will improve Michigan's life style. The legislation will most likely leave many people out of jobs and homes, which is "exactly what they deserve for only adding to Michigan's financial crisis." To help show how successful the law will be, Governor Snyder has already appointed seven financial managers; from which over 9000 school districts, unions, and cities have been closed. On top of the loss of over 9000 institutions, the new law has also cost 3.14 billion dollars. Governor Snyder promises that "we need to spend money in order to make money" and that Michigan is become more Pure with every step of this legislation.

The Michigan Government would like us to make a final note that anyone who still feels that this new law is bad should report to the nearest government office; there, tough men will help you fix any of your doubts. 🐾

Said Snyder: I will crush this kitten into a little, carbon-based recyclable wad if you don't do what I ask. THINK OF THE KITTENS, PEONS.
