

DAILY BULL

The Daily Bull is probably not suitable for those under age 18 and probably should not be taken seriously... like toes of the camel variety!

Tuesday, September 6, 2011

Why does the Air Force need expensive new bombers? Have the people we've been bombing over the years been complaining?
-George Wallace

Destruction of France Sends World into Fury of Mass Indifference

by Ian Smith
~ Up 'n Coming Writer

As it was reported last week, France has been turned to rubble by a nuclear attack orchestrated by the People's Republic of China. Now coupled with the official body count implying not a single Frenchie escaped the blast. But based on current polls..., no one cares. The Bull decided to investigate. When we asked on the street, we received varied responses ranging from, "Yeah, I heard about that. I can't say I'm blame them" to the common, "HAHAHAHAHA."

A release from the National People's Congress states, "We have only done what the rest of the world didn't have the balls to do. I mean, come on. They sucked. We did you all a favor." The general reaction has been, "Huh.... That sounds about right."

... see Croissants on back

Creator of Pokemon becomes Sixth Prime Minister of Japan

By Kyle Roe ~ Daily Bull

Satoshi Tajiri, well known as the creator of Pokemon, was elected last Tuesday as Japan's sixth prime minister. This victory is being taken with enthusiastic joy by most of Japan's youth and the entire Western population. Sadly, in contrast, Tajiri finds his administration faced with great criticism by their neighboring country China. The criticisms range from mild debates over his foreign policies, to massive rioting protests over the fact that most of his voters were American men born in the 90's that somehow obtained voting rights in Japan. Already facing such a staggering list of domestic problems, the last thing new Prime Minister needs is a spite-filled relationship with China, Japan's biggest trading partner.

China's media continue to lash out at

Tajiri, making accusations like "he is a money hungry 'hawk' who plans to change over all of Japan's foreign exports to a corrupted 'color based' trading system." (In the color based system countries would have the option to purchase Red exports or Green exports; both options granted the receiving country with similar, yet in some ways different, goods.) The Chinese media is also playing against his comments supporting a highly controversial Tokyo shrine. The shrine was constituted to honoring fallen citizens who died while watching a seizure-inducing episode of Pokemon, in which the main character Ash is thrown into a strobe light filled room in a failed at-

... see Legend of Koizumi? on back

Does it ever feel like the paper is talking to you? Yeah... Kinda like now?

Sudoku - now with digits!

9	4			2	7
		6	3	9				5
5	2	8					7
1			6
		9				1
					4			6
	9					7	6	2
2				6	9	3
			2	7			1	9

STUDIO

PIZZA

PIZZAS PIZZA LOVERS LOVE!
Daily Specials at www.thestudiopizza.com
10% Discount for All Students
Downtown Hancock, across from Finlandia

Couch Locked? Munchies?
No Problem, The Studio Delivers!

www.thestudiopizza.com

482-5100

... Legend of Koizumi? from front

tempt by Team Rocket to actually kill him. Tajiri's support of this memorial is being called "hypocritical" and "just plain childish".

"New Japanese Prime Minister admits being a strong advocate of animal fighting and the breeding of fire dogs, electric rats, and other 'monsters' that somehow lay eggs." rumored the nationalistic China Global Times, "He is also writing a bill which will require all university students of graduate level to change their study to that of animal biology."

I fully expect for all the world's problems to be solved by the new prime minister of Japan, through Pokemon. Kind of like the Legend of Koizumi

Daily Bull

EDITOR IN CHIEF Liz Fujita
BOB THE BUILDER Jon "Big O" Mahan

MONOPOLY GUY Alec Hamer
SCRIBE Ben Loucks
BREAD WINNER Stephen Whittaker

FACULTY ADVISOR David Lefty Olson
WEBMASTER Kyle Roe

Liz Fujita, Simon Mused, Jon "Big-O" Mahan, Alec Hamer, Stephen Whittaker, Benjamin Loucks, Sam Schall, Mike Freisen, Bill Melcher, Kyle Roe, Cameron Long, Olivia Zajac, John Earnest, Nathan Invincible, Will Lytle, Bryne Judy, John Pastore, and Rippy the Gator.

©2011 by the Daily Bull, a non-profit organization. All rights reserved. Articles may be freely distributed electronically or on late night talk shows provided credit is given, and that this notice is included. The Daily Bull reserves the right to refuse any advertisements or guest articles without reason. All opinionated letters sent to the editor (on paper or to bull@mtu.edu) will be treated as material to be published unless expressly stated otherwise by the sender. Original works printed in the Daily Bull remain the property of the creator, however the Daily Bull reserves the right to reprint any submissions in future issues unless specifically asked not to do so by the creator. If you keep reading this small text, you'll resort to reckless alcoholism.

The Daily Bull would like to thank the Daily Bull for buying our own damn printer that this publication is printed on. We would also like to thank the Student Activity Fee for helping to pay for our paper and toner costs.

Advertising inquiries, questions & comments should be directed to bull@mtu.edu

Regarded by the world as one of the greatest minds behind video games, Tajiri replaces Naoto Kan, who quit after widespread criticism over his administration's handling of the tsunami, nuclear disaster, and Nintendo Japan's unprecedented loss in 3DS sales. A former mastermind of worldwide phenomenon games, Tajiri will most likely focus on these immense challenges left behind by his predecessor by: remaking older Japanese economic ideas on modern technology (naming them the same as before but putting catchy words in front of them, for example: Fire Military, and Leaf Environmental Policies, and Heart Health Care), creating another Pokemon Colosseum game, and exiling Nintendo's main competition: everyone else. As of now Satoshi Tajiri's playful and friendly press conferences have won the hearts of most Japanese citizens, and of course his loyal Pokemon fans (same thing?).

But in China the media is calling Tajiri a right winged nationalist, and has predicted that his decision to turn all hospitals and stores into animal hospitals and pet supply stores will lead to a great drop in the health of Japanese citizens. Even more liberal newspapers in China are highlighting his comments on sending ten year-olds to other countries to catalog the animal species there as being both random and insane. And even more liberal newspapers than the even more liberal newspapers are taking shots at his idea to let young teens run animal fighting gyms and large swimming pool stadiums. While completely unbiased newspapers like the Lode have not yet made any comments as they seemed to not notice Japan events as being crucial to the American newspaper reading audience.

Japan, long used to being the region's most dominant power -- also the region's largest producer of addicting games that teach children that it is ok to follow old men into tall grass to learn how to "catch a pocket monster" -- has been unsettled by China's increasing growth over the past years. Currently China's disgust for the ideas held by Prime Minister Tajiri, and Japan's fear of China's rapid growth is causing strong tension; tension which hopefully does not lead to any rash actions by ether of the countries.

A full list of Satoshi Tajiri's 646 plans for Japan can be found on his website and in Tajiri's low budget propaganda advertisements which were released last year on September 18th named: "Pokemon Black and White".

Last Pi-Day Night

by Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull
with vaguely sincere apologies to Katy Perry

There's a math book on my bed
There's a number in my head
Post-Its all over the room
Wave-form functions in the pool

I smell like a Sharpie pen
After proving stuff again
Typing on my 89
There's a tangent or cosine

Homework from last night
Ended up online, I'm screwed

Oh well, It's a calc-based blur
But I'm pretty sure it ruled... damn.

Last Pi-Day night
3.14159
Used to calculate the sine
Think it's 1, let's hope that's fine

Last Pi-Day night
Yeah we rounded up somewhere
And gave ourselves quite a scare
So we quit and drew a square

... Croissants from front

Even religious and political leaders agree. President Obama chimed in, "During these tough economic times, the best thing that we could do for the American people was to destroy, uh, the French." While Pope Benedict XVI responds, " 'Bout fuckin' time!" Michele Bachmann took advantage of the situation and spouted, "This attack, as wonderful as it may be, is a message from God to ban gay marriage!"

Alas, as time goes on, it becomes clearer and clearer how fucking little France mattered in this fleeting world of ours. And all it took to correct such a blight was a few hundred tiny, 45 megaton nuclear warheads. And now that Old France is nothing but a bittersweet memory, Cleveland has placed its bid as the new city of love, citing that without all that pesky industry, it can really focus on romance. With the sheer number of abandoned houses it really is the perfect place to settle down. In addition, you can really jump on the "It's better to have love and lost" bandwagon when your significant other is brutally murdered! Or just simply 'lost' to the city...

WOAH! Hey kids! You can learn French, the now dead language, too! Impress your friends and attract ALL the ladies with this easy to say phrase!

J'adore tuer et mange babes!
I love to kill and eat babies!

Heh.... French people. ☹

It's okay, Katy Perry. Sometimes my math homework makes me want to resort to wreckless alcoholism, too.

Last Pi-Day night
We wrote digits in the park
Geeky vandals in the dark
Made mathematical remarks

Last Pi-Day night
Yeah, we'll never write 'em all
Pi is never gonna stop-op, woah!
Last Pi-Day night

This Pi-Day night
Do it all again...