Squirrels

By Jeanine Chmielewski
~ Daily Bull

Most colleges have an abundance of fluffy-tailed devil monsters that run around their campus stealing food from unsuspecting first years. That's right, I am talking about squirrels. These devil monsters are found across campuses around the world. So, why are they not found here?

"It is weird not seeing them here at Tech," said an incoming transfer student, "I just came from the University of Michigan. There were squirrels everywhere. Up here . . . none. I haven't even seen one. How do you do that?"

Well, we asked a mechanical engineer (because OBVIOUSLY they know about this sort of thing). "The reason that the squirrels aren't here is obvious: they can't compete with our intellect. I mean, we engineers are so brilliant and fantastic and ego ego ego . . . etc."

National Supplies of Givadam are Dwindling

By Lunartic ~ Daily Bull

In an unfortunate twist of events, the coming year may see a severe shortage of the much-needed pharmaceutical product known as Givadam.

Givadam is a drug that is used to provide motivation, empathy, and energy. Many people said that using Givadam has been better than morning coffee for getting them up and moving. Artists, speakers, performers, and most especially humanitarians and healthcare providers have Givadam is produced by the pharmaceutical company Pilzeer, which is also known for producing Shootafed (for itchy trigger fingers), Zombrex, aLEETaminophen (for nerd-induced headaches), Cramitol, Pepto Dismal. Unfortunately, Pilzeer was forced to shut down several of its production sites due to excessive financial troubles following a lawsuit. Earlier this year, a pre-teen girl was given an experimental drug for a would-be-fatal case of Bieber Fever.

The drug kicked in just as she was about to fling herself in front of a car, having killed just enough of the marketing parasites that had compromised her mental, but the escape was so narrow that she was not able to avoid the collision entirely and suffered a nosebleed from the ensuing accident. Pilzeer was promptly sued for the nosebleed, with the patient demanding compensation for alleged negligence, for the drug not being as effective as it should have been, and for the emotional trauma of realizing she was at one point a fan of cited that their efforts are thanks to high amounts of Givadam in their systems. It is well known that people with Givadam have higher life expectancy, higher happiness, and are generally more successful, accomplished, and affluent people. However, this might come to an early end.

... I lov-SQUIRELI from front

After that interview we decided to go to the people who actually know what they are talking about. "The mechanical engineer isn't actually that far off," said a forestry major, to our surprise, "except it isn't our intellect that the squirrels can't compete with. On the contrary, squirrels are much smarter than your average engineer. It is the legendary Albino Squirrel that is what they can't compete with."

After doing some research, we were able to confirm the forestry major's allegations. Chipmunks are as intelligent and annoying as an engineer, while a normal squirrel may rise to the intellect of a forestry or anthropology major, the legendary Albino Squirrel has the mental prowess of a physicist. The Albino Squirrel has used his gift to drive out all of the other squirrels from the surrounding areas. All it had to say was "Sorry, we only use MATLAB here," and all of the other squirrels and chipmunks ran for the hills in terror.

This legendary beast is an elusive creature. If you EVER see it, take a picture and run for your life. Also send it into the Bull, we need more pictures on record. 🐿️

(best Bieber friends forever). Despite every plea from the one sane person in the courtroom (the janitor), the jury awarded the patient a compensation of "Eleventy-nine hundred billions of dollars." Pilzeer was immediately forced to sell most of their production facilities to pay the settlement. Experts have blamed not only Obama and the three presidents before and after him – whoever is elected next will be pinned with the embarrassment of this, complete with a cone of shame, the instant he/she is sworn into office.

While the legal system bickers and argues over whose fault this is, the people are left with the consequences. Without a reliable supply of Givadarn, students will likely begin to do poorly in their academic pursuits, showing symptoms similar to Senioritis. Stupid, shallow people everywhere will be turned away from receiving the consolation and whining they need as the nice guys that they go to, deprived of Givadarn, will no longer be able to pretend to be listening to the eighth time that "I thought he had changed since the seventh time he cheated on me!"

The population will be unable to muster the will to follow whiny politics and panic at each new crisis that breaks out. General productivity will plummet and people will really stop caring about all the pointless crap around them.

The Givadarn shortage is nigh. Pilzeer says that it should have a new facility put up and running within three months, but in the meantime people will either be forced to accept the black-market substitute drug Givaphuq or be condemned to crippling apathy until supplies are restored. 🐿️
