Residence Hall Council Installs Prisoner Death Pits in Front of Walker

by Kyle Roe ~ Daily Bull

This year, Michigan Tech has been honored by the United States Prison System in being selected to host the 23rd annual Con vs Co-ed Winter Games. Hosting this coming year's CVC Winter Games is sure to bring positive attention to the school and make a great impression on prospective students. "When we were given the offer by the government, it was not because of the large load of grants they offered the school," stated Cain Troost, President of the IRHC. "I accepted the offer because I felt I knew what OUR students wanted. Michigan Tech students love hockey, so of course they would love playing a no-skates and no-padding version of it against federal prisoners!"

"Doom Ball" is the main event at the CVC Games. On a rink roughly a third the size of a hockey rink, students pit their athletic might against federal prisoners for glory and a grand prize of $8,900. The game requires all players to construct a "broom" from items they find at home. For most students, brooms are simple sweeping brooms with duct-tape and some decorative leopard striped coloring. For the prisoners, who are given access to the local armory, their brooms tend to be made of machetes, police batons, and baseball bats with nails sticking out of them. The battle of student teams vs. mass murderers, psychopaths, and Internet music pirates entails trying to get a colorful blue ball, filled with a random amount of pressure sensitive explosives, into the opposing team's goal.

So what gets students to play with their life at a chance of winning barely under 9000 dollars? Third year Jon R. Dash says it's for the fun, and to pay off his college tuition. "As the goalie for my team I do worry that that little blue ball will get past me and cause a napalm explosion that kills me and burns half my team, but that's not the point of Doom Ball," Jon told us with a full hearted smile, "We students are playing for the thrill of a hockey game, without having to worry about giant Canadian hockey players shoving us around all the time. The prisoners are always good sports, and only swing at our legs with their glass shard-coated brooms when the refs are not paying attention."

The other members of Jon's team, the Bookheads.png, all seemed to agree with Jon's love for the creative game. "Even if

REALLY?!

By Kay McMahon ~ Daily Bull

Murder, drugs, and violence are illegal (within reason I suppose). However, here in Houghton County at MTU those things don't all-too-often pertain to us. What does is worse.

For example: As I sit in my lab attempting to do my studies I hear various arrays of laughter and began to feel outraged. Really? Maybe when you're in the labs you could STFU so the rest of us can get something done. Woe is me, my friends. Now that I am procrastinating my studies account of I can't even hear myself think because my peers are obnoxious, I felt it was time to collect my not-so-academic thoughts, so I left the labs.

I thought maybe I'd like to go shopping. It turns out the supply of clothing in Houghton County consists of 35 XXSM t-shirts and 85 XXL's. Some of us really are a happy medium... I mean really, we're all forced to shop at the same three stores; try to make us all wear the same two sizes and you're really just asking for it. So, with no such luck shopping I figured I might as well get some lunch - considering I know I'll never fit into the X-SM t-shirt, I'd better shoot for the XL! I stopped at McDonalds.

Waiting in line for fast food when the menu is as easy as hamburgers and french fries, we so often find ourselves behind someone who has to calculate every mathematical equation to figure out if the dollar menu is going to be cheaper than the value meal. Are you kidding me? REALLY?! Next time, just get a fricken happy meal.

So, going home and sitting on facebook pre-comparing to vent about my shitty day, I decided to take a poll and see what types of things annoyed other people, and let me tell you, more people have something to say about that than I could process. If you find yourself doing any of these things, I suggest a personality check and an update of the quality of comrades you surround yourself with.

Things people told me include: Using a flight of stairs to go up one floor, spitting on the sidewalk (what's even the point?), telling everyone how great you did on your exam (SUCK IT), people who drag their feet when they walk, wanna be gangsta's, wanna be gangsta's who drag their feet when they walk, people who mess up the flow of traffic walking in-and-out of Fisher, people who say "um" a million times when they speak (or "like"), and the list goes on and on and on. I think we all can agree that all of these should be punishable by death.

Editor's Note: If these were all punishable by death, the world would consist of about four people and a well-trained ball python. Good luck everyone! 🐍

we lose, it's the great experience with friends we remember, not the decapitation of our star defensive player," noted with a smile by Samantha Wise, lead offensive player for the Bookheads.

Con vs Co-ed Season starts at the beginning of next semester. Along with the state-of-the-art rinks being installed on campus, the government has also funded the placement of HD cameras. If you can't make it outside, or fear flying shrapnel, you can enjoy the carnage at www.mtu.edu/webcams. This coming year we hope to have a great, family friendly time. Plus, there are rumors that the famous "Skulleater," a seven-life sentence mass murderer, will be playing. He's sure to bring extra fun for both the players and their watching families! 🐉
