Billion in 1 Pregnancy!

by Jon 'Big O' Mahan
~ Daily Bull

A woman with nine uterus-es (uteri?) has given birth to nine babies in what is being called the rarest pregnancy on record. The woman was diagnosed with a super rare condition which has never been seen before, in which she had nine uteruses. Instances of women having two uteruses have been recorded, but this was the first occurrence of having nine. The doctors told her she could/should never give birth on account of the decreased space in her body to have children. Well, against their decisions, she did. And over the weekend, she gave birth to nine healthy babies.

The birth has drawn lots of feedback and criticism. Many people are calling it a miracle that she could have so many babies while

by Michael Lennon ~ Guest Writer

Following Michael Bay's success with big budget films, there will be a new addition to the Transformers Movie franchise. Michael Bay promises to be using the techniques he pioneered in 'Transformers 3', namely recycled footage from 'The Island'.

"It was an intuitive concept really, I acted as an Avatar to the movie industry: One thing appearing as another. Many great stories, like Avatar, have reused familiar or old themes, and this story has old footage." Michael Bay made no further comments without using the movie Avatar as an analogy. 'Transformers 4: Dark Parts of the Sun' promises to have less than 12 minutes of newly filmed footage, some of which will be plot related --the rest will be recycled action/explosion sequences from 'Badboys 2', 'Armageddon', and 'Myth Busters'.

"Mr. Statham, we hear that you'll be starring in the next Transformers sequel!"

"Say what?"

The original script had an additional 10 minutes involving a racially stereotypical duo, which was cut pending a lawsuit for obvious reasons. The two zany characters were to be named BeanBot and TacoTron, whose boisterous charsome are saying her food, housing, and babysitting bills should all be taken care of because of the uniqueness of this case. Others are saying she's an irresponsible person for allowing herself to get pregnant. In any case, however, octomom has been dethroned.

"It's kind of amazing when you think about it. I mean, I got told 'you should stop this, you shouldn't have these babies,' but I'm going to have nine. Besides, they're the babies related to one impossible go back up uterus, but just as happy they are, nine buggers making plans for the Tonight Show, Conan O'Brien, and various other late night programs to talk about her kids.

Many have asked if she's going to go for another set. "No, I don't think so. After all, I already have more kids than three average families combined. Although it would be interesting for sure, but I'm not trying for any more records," said the mother, as she quickly raced back to take care of her noisy ruckus makers. The mother is expected to spend the next 9 months effectively shackled to her home trying to take care of her children.

acter and laughable antics serve to break the flow of what could be a good storyline. Michael Bay explained that: "What may appear to be tolerated racism in the guise of comedic relief is really a statement for the unspoken distress of minorities in our country; just like Avatar. Bean-Bot said it best with 'Dry beans and tough nuts!' Also, I made 'Avatar.'"

He will also be re-editing footage from 'Transformers 2: Revenge of the Fallen' to supplement his upcoming deep sea exploration documentary which will show the existence of undiscovered sea life and Megatron.

We hear that this is an exclusive still from the upcoming Transformers 4 trailer!
