Shocking Revelations Regarding Referees

-Big O Reporting

As many of you know, MTU lost to their rivals at home this year, in a 5-2 game. What many of you may also know if you were there, is that the referees seemed to be almost completely and totally blind. Well, it took some research, but this reporter has gotten to the bottom of this issue as it were.

Immediately following the game, many fans were interviewed. The overwhelming response from fans was that "Those refs were totally paid off". Could it be? Could the integrity of the organization of referees as a whole be so easily undermined? This reporter went undercover, and scoured financial records of anyone likely to have given the refs money, and the records of the refs themselves. The account balances seemed to point towards no ill-dealings. So what could have happened?

Well, as I mentioned, I was already in the accounts and under cover for all the referees. So I did a little bit of snooping. Upon searching the medical records of the referees, I found something positively and utterly shocking. All the refs that have ever ref'd for MTU have been blind and deaf. Every single one of them. Medically blind and deaf! There was also another anomaly among the referees of the NMU game. One of them wrote their religion as 'black magic'. This simply could not be left alone. I had to investigate.

I searched far and wide, and found 3 of the referees. When asked about why we were getting penalties that weren't there. "To be honest, we couldn't see or hear anything. We just called penalties and hoped there was something there. Wait... What? You mean that NMU knocked the MTU goalie over, and then proceeded to elbow his helmet off, and we called a double penalty on MTU? Wow... Did anyone even score though? I

Say Some Shit

by Kay McMahon ~ Daily Bull

Have you ever thought about how many times someone said "Oh hey you smell good" in contrast with how many times you thought someone smelt bad and never said anything at all? Why is that? I always wonder when it became socially acceptable to compliment someone but not to give some a shout out to let them know they smell, well, bad. You know, like "Bitch! You smell like tacos!"

I'm not suggesting it's time to start being mean, per se - however, it's become so typical and common to tell people the truth on some days and not others. For example: if someone is annoying you one day, instead of telling them they're annoying you, you're nice to them and just talk about how they're annoying you to other people. So what happens the next day when you're not annoyed anymore and other people let them know that yesterday they annoyed you? When shit hits the fan with a friend, you've got to say it. "STFU bitch, you're annoying me today."

...from Black Magician Ref on front don't remember... "One ref was quoted as saying. The answers among them seemed to be the same. They couldn't make out any penalties and only listened to what the black magic ref said. They can't even explain how they even heard him, only that they did.

That left a question burning on my mind though. What did the black magic referee do? When I went to his home, there was nobody there. Completely empty. As I walked in, there was a cold shiver, I clutched my cross, and I swear I heard a faint screaming down the empty hallways as I scoured the house. Finally, I found it! It was a spell book. Specifically, it was a spell book for conjuring hockey penalties! I didn't even know such things existed! There were spells for invisible tripping, charging, pushing, holding, and elbowing. Spells to teleport players randomly to the scene of a magical foul so as to frame them. There was even a spell to make a small green dog run across the ice- something that many fans were able to corroborate. Sadly I could not stay. The chills got colder, my soul itself felt like it was being ripped from me. And the screams got closer and closer.

With this evidence, I hope to convince the WCHA to schedule a rematch, this time with refs that aren't blind! Or Def! Or black magicians! 🙄

...from Shitsnax on front There are all things that we all think about and never say. Why don't we say them? If we fail to tell someone to stfu everytime they flip a switch and say "let there be light" then they'll never stop. If you don't tell farmer Joe he chews like a horse, chances are he will continue to live his life chewing as such. If you don't rear end the asshole that didn't use his turn signal, maybe next time he will.

Our petpeeves in life a lot of the time honestly consist of the things we neglect to say. So, start saying some honest shit. 🙄
