A Friendly Guide: Where to Sit in Class

By Kay McMahon ~ Daily Bull

I am pretty sure that half of the MTU student population needs a little tutorial on where the fuck to sit in class. So, we shall begin with the first day of class. The gist of it is you will sit for the semester wherever you sit your ass first. Not always, but typically. So, if you are an over achieving asshole who knows every answer and answers every question like a smart ass with know-it-all remarks, please don't sit in the back. All you're doing is drawing attention to those of us who are trying to avoid assholes like you.

If you were born a linebacker, a skyscraper, or with a fucking afro, sit in the back row. Do you know how hard it is to see over you? I even stand 5'9", which is pretty average, but I still can't see shit over you. And you

So as most of you are no doubt aware (or will soon learn), it's that certain time of the year when your television is flooded by delightful infomercials featuring helpful old people telling you how other old people are bending you over and FUCKING YOU IN THE ASS (metaphorically of course). They then go on to tell you how if you don't vote for them "you are a STUPID BITCH that failed life and should go jump off the nearest cliff" (not so metaphorical). Now as helpful as these wise gentlefolk are, I cannot help but feel the slightest bit annoyed and the least bit offended by the fact the once great American political system has somehow warped into this massive cluster fuck.

I, for one, still cherish the original ideas set forth in the Constitution (forced on me by my Institutions prof) and would hope that they could once again be carried out by politicians occupied with ideals and not agendas (or mass rape). Personally I think we should add an amendment saying that "We the people declare, that hence forth, no dumb ass shall be elected to office (unless of course it was done because it would be really, really funny like Snooki being governor of New Jersey)", though this would never work because the people who get to vote on the issue would be the ones most affected.

Luckily I have foreseen this road block, so do not worry, because I have a plan (and a dream and quite possibly something else from all this intense blood flow to the brain and other delicate regions). Looking through history I found an inspiring idea from FDR, "Nobody will ever deprive the American people of the right to vote except the American people themselves and the only way they could do this is by not voting." Of course what he meant to say is the only way to stick it to the politicians by giving them the cold shoulder. Hell, the female population has been using this trick to coerce men since God ripped that rib out of Adam (lovingly observed ladies).

The way we can accomplish this monumental shunning is by making sure not a single vote is cast. If no votes are cast, then no one can get elected and then Washington might get the message that everyone is sick of their bullshit. So this means it is the duty of everyone reading to spread the message though all the wonderful devices available to us

Thoughts On the NFL Replacement Refs

By Cameron Long ~ Daily Bull

I'll lead with two caveats and a taunt. First, I don't like the Packers. Second, I didn't watch the game on Monday night because I'm from Michigan - I'm a Colts fan. Suck it, Packers! Now then, to business.

Thought #1: If the replacement refs had made a terrible call against the Seahawks, y'all wouldn't care nearly as much. That is, Packer fans are primarily upset because their team got the shaft, not necessarily that a bad call was made.

Thought #2: I don't see a way that the ref lockout ends well for the league. Players, coaches, and fans are pissed and, sooner or later, the replacements will lose control and an ugly incident will mar the NFL for years to come, forcing the league to sign whatever CBA proposal the NFLRA slides across the table.

Thought #3: Quit bitching. They're here for the foreseeable future. ☺

(don't exclude the power of bathroom stall art). Not only that but we must protest at political rallies and voting booths with a combination of human barricades and laxative filled hotdog giveaways (no one's going to vote after one of those). Also a competitive mailbox baseball league will be established to deal with those pesky absentee votes.

know how when you slouch to the right we can see briefly over you to the left and when you slouch to the left we can see briefly over you to the right? Why the FUCK do you move so much? Do you know how incredibly annoying it is to pay attention when you're dancing in your chair and you're as huge as Frankenstein?

Next, if you know someone sits in that chair every day and that you typically sit somewhere else, why would you sit there? That's like the same as harassment. That's like shoplifting someone else's chair. Do you think it's funny to make people sit somewhere unfamiliar to them? And why the FUCK are you sitting there anyway? You have your own desk. And it's probably better than that one!

Lastly, if you KNOW you have to piss a lot, if you KNOW you are going to have to take a call, if you KNOW you are going to leave class early, why the FUCK do you people sit in the middle of the classroom where rows are twenty seats long? Are you stupid? Take this, learn from this. Don't be a fuck. And get your ass outta my chair. ☺
