New Poll: Light Pole Outside Fisher Undecided

Alec Hamer ~ Daily Bull

In a new Gallup Poll released this Wednesday, it appears that the light pole outside of Fisher (south entrance with all the political bumper stickers) just can't decide how it will vote this November. Upon going to see the pole myself I learned that the pole has bumper stickers endorsing republicans, democrats, and libertarians. There is even a sticker that says "Tax the rich".

"I just don't know... They all present such a solid case!" exclaims the pole each and every time it is asked about who it will vote for this November. "I mean Obama is great and all but he is already in office. Romney is also great but he has no experience as President." The pole later added "pffffff.".

A Brief Interview: Dr. Glenn D. Mroz

Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

What you are about to read is entirely nonfiction. "GASP!" you cry, "The Bull has produced something that isn't utterly spun from their butts?" Yes, good and loyal reader, yes! Today is the day! I have spoken words with The Man Himself, our president and university head honcho, Glenn Mroz!

I ascended the golden tower called "Admin." The gate to his palace is guarded, but I was permitted to pass. His desk radiated with untold knowledge, the bookcases shimmering with brainfood of all topics. I felt small and illiterate -- but the interview must go on.

pus to some of our leadership in a more playful way than the standard, boring interview questions. So, to begin: who is your favorite superhero, and why?

Dr. Mroz: When I was a kid I was always impressed with the movie The Invisible Man, based off the novel by H.G. Wells. Of course, that movie was already, like, 20 years old when I saw it.

Daily Bull: So, you don't keep up on any of the modern Avengers or DC comics movies and stuff?

Dr. Mroz: No, I don't, other than what I read with my grandkids. My grandson, he's all about Spider-man. I remember when those were dime comic books!

So can it be December yet? So all this can stop?

Daily Bull: What is the best live music experience you've ever had?

Dr. Mroz: I attended a concert at Aragon Ballroom in Chicago – an Iron Butterfly concert. Between the opening act and the main show there was actually a bomb threat! So, everyone had to leave, and we were all outside -- cops all over the place – until finally they determined there was no bomb. Other than that, I'd say the Pep Band.

Daily Bull: They're something else, aren't they? Do you have any musical talents?

Dr. Mroz: ... I can play a kazoo.

Daily Bull: That's about the extent of my skills, too, to be honest. [laughs] Where is your favorite place to go in the Keweenaw?

Dr. Mroz: Definitely the Copper Harbor area; we like to escape to the marina. There's all the beautiful terrain and the biking and gift shops, and of course there's no cell service. Plus, a lot of people forget: Isle Royale is part of Keweenaw County. The British actually overwintered a ship in 1812 in McCargoe Cove there.

Daily Bull: I'm sure you're aware of the popular feud -- pop or soda?

Dr. Mroz: I say pop.

Daily Bull: Tomorrow is the last day you will ever order pizza. What toppings do you get?

Dr. Mroz: Cheese, sausage, and mushrooms.

Daily Bull: Do you secretly skydive, deep sea SCUBA, or anything extreme?

Dr. Mroz: No, nothing like that. I used to have dreams about playing hockey, but I never really played hockey. When I was a student here at Tech I played broomball – though of course it was just a Winter Carnival activity then.

Daily Bull: What position did you play?

Dr. Mroz: I was on offense. We weren't so sophisticated about taping up the brooms then, that's changed a lot.

A good many "thank you for your times" and "it was grand talking to you" later, I departed the Administrative Palace. Who should I interview next? And what should I ask them (within reason)? Send me your ideas (eafujita@mtu.edu) and I just might do it! Of course, I make no promises, admin schedules and all that. 🐻

Although no one knows who the pole will vote for, both candidates want its vote. "We intend to arrive in Houghton and not leave until we know its vote is guaranteed" wrote Mitt Romney on his twitter page. It looks like the Romney campaign is looking to do another; reboot this time focussing on what matters most to the light pole outside of Fisher. The campaign has already released the new slogan: "Light One Up." It seems that the whole Romney campaign has shifted focus to one particular light pole but it is not alone.

The pro-Obama super PAC Those For a Better Future disseminated a press release this morning that declared "we will spend $100,000 an hour until we know that the pole will vote for Obama." It is not clear how the PAC intends to spend the $100,000/hr because according to US election law, it does not have to disclose spending or donors. Said one top official from Those For a Better Future "I think we will put up a few billboards in view of the light pole. The rest will be spent on television ads and pancakes." When she was made aware of the fact that the light pole doesn't watch television she had nothing to say.

When libertarian front man Ron Paul was asked for a comment about the poll he said "I don't know what is going on. Are you Betty?"

This all may seem crazy for one vote. Because it is. 🐻
