Bathroom Blitz

Bathrooms. The porcelain throne that every President, Pope, Queen, and Emperor must surrender their digested food to. The problem is, dear reader, that we all know not every crapper is created equal. Some flush when they want to, others have more suction power than a hooker with a Hoover, and even more are just plain gross/scary. In order to make sure you readers have the best pooping experience at Michigan Tech, this reporter has made this review of loos, Johns, and powder rooms. (Ok, not that last one. I am not gonna go into a girls restroom. Public safety, calm down.)

The Library - These restrooms are the white-bread of restrooms. They are average, dull, mostly clean, and stereotypically fine. Unless it is finals week. When finals come around getting into one of these bad boys is harder than getting into that one girl's pants (you know the one I am talking about...). The library's silence creeps into these bathrooms and librarians are known to shush people that are too loud while taking care of business.

Fisher Bathrooms - The Russian roulette of bathrooms. These bathrooms can either be heaven on earth or Satan's butt-hole. Walk into one and you should immediately tell which is which by smell alone. For some reason, the bathrooms that are most frequently used are the ones most often not clean. BEWARE READERS: CHECK TO SEE IF THERE IS TOILET PAPER BEFORE YOU SQUAT. These bathrooms are known to run low from time to time and nobody wants to get caught with their pants down. However, the second story Fisher Men's bathroom has a wall in which people wrote their hometowns while at the urinal. The result is a variable who's who of pissers.

Rekhi Bathrooms - Perfect for self-conscious CS majors, or people who just want their damn privacy, these bathrooms only have one urinal that is located immediately adjacent to a stall. I think this was designed to give the CS people the closed confined space they are used to. These bathrooms are perfect for guys, as the urinal is almost always pristine. But the stalls? A completely different matter. God has abandoned the stalls in Rekhi. Use at your own risk.

MUB Bathrooms (3rd floor) - This is where kings go to shit. Chrome and automation are everywhere. I am surprised that they don't teleport the crap directly out of your bowels. The toilets are kept 100% clean. The water is never spurting out of the faucet, and everything is as sterilized as a surgery room. I felt bad stepping into the place, let alone taking a poo there. The only problem is the automation may decide your time is up and attempt to disembowel you by flushing preemptively.

The Hidden Bathroom – This bathroom is hidden, and for good reason. While the MUB 3rd floor bathrooms are nice in that they are as shiny as the new Ipad 5gs with optional midget, this bathroom affords something no other bathroom can: privacy. It is a single-suite, locks, and is located in a hidden part of campus that sees little to no foot traffic. It is said that to find this bathroom, you must be blessed by the albino squirrel, have eaten some of the bark off the EERC tree, ridden in a golden boat of some sort, and have smelted some iron with a Blair Witch/Warlock. If you have done these things, dear reader, you will have access to the best pooping experience Tech has to offer. 🐿️
