In yet another attempt by the North Korean Government at having some semblance of importance in world matters, the North Korean Government will be showing off its PEEN to everyone sometime later this month. The PEEN is the classification for the long-range rocket it will be firing off towards an as of yet unknown target. It is assumed said rocket will fly over Japan. Whether or not the US' Patriot missiles will take out the rocket is yet to be seen. It is also unknown if the PEEN will be carrying a payload, or if it will really just be a test. Let's just hope that the Mayans weren't right, and an errant NK missile doesn't accidentally set off World War 3. Of course, that would be the greatest irony wouldn't it? All those naysayers, and then BOOM WW3. Game over people, game over.

Palestine scored a major victory recently in the UN. The Palestinian 'government' was recently awarded the status of Non-Member Observer State. What exactly this really means is unclear, but the leaders of Palestine at least are happier, for now.

The world will wait with bated breath in hopes that Palestine and Hamas don't decide to celebrate with some more fireworks. After all, we all know where that gets us. Naturally, Israel and the US were very upset about the decision to grant Palestine some sort of kinda-sorta-not-really-recognized statehood. Calls for US withdrawal from the UN meanwhile are starting to rise to an all time high in the US.

For some good news for us all, Twinkie and other brands of delicious but oh-so-bad-for-you food are being bid upon! That's right, now you can continue to put those delicious Ding Dongs in your mouth, and enjoy that great feeling when you swallow! Or perhaps you prefer to open yourself a Ho-Ho, or grab yourself a pair of Sno-Balls. Whatever your Hostess delight may be, rest safe knowing that most likely the wonderful little treat you're used to might just end up in your mouth again!

Finally, at the Meadow's Racecourse in Western Pennsylvania, for the first time ever, a deer has won a horse race! That's right ladies and gentleman, a group of deer managed to find themselves onto the racecourse, and proceeded to race around the course until they crossed the finish line, well before any of the horses did. Bambi took first, with Rudolph coming in at a close second. Race announcers were pleased by the sudden change of events at the race. However, rioting ensued when money was not given to the first place horses because the deer had all taken first, second, and third. It is estimated that spectators of the event lost thousands of dollars due to that one race. It is rumored that the racecourse is being sued because of its actions following the deer win. The deer who won the race however, could not be reached for comment. They were, however, delicious. ☹
