Michigan Tech Mad Science: Sending Secret Messages Across the Ocean Using Orphan Socks, Erasers, and Sombreros

by Chase "MacGyver" Peterson ~ Daily Bull

Every mad scientist knows that the internet is unreliable for sending and receiving encoded messages. I mean any halfwit with a computer can gain access to your email, or spoof an IP address to redirect incoming messages, and don't get me started about Google being the new government watch dog. With all this technology, it's getting harder and harder for the mad scientist with a global domination plan to setup satellite offices around the globe (unless you are Starbucks, McDonalds, or Atheismo forgive, Wally-world.) Today we are going to look at establish-

Christmas Bull

by Elise Conley ~ Daily Bull

A North Pole man has been told he can no longer operate his seasonal business venture, delivering toys to children, after he violated several laws and incurred the wrath of politically correct organizations from across the globe.

Santa Claus, who is also known as Father Christmas, Saint Nicholas, and Frank Smith, has been ordered to "close up shop" after concerns were raised about the welfare of not only his staff but animals in his care.

Trouble began when several employees of short stature complained that they found the term "elf" offensive. These complaints were upheld resulting in many vertically challenged workers becoming eligible for compensation from Claus, after years of name calling and stereotyping, with one attorney for the group describing a workplace environment that was "sickening - the way short people were only employed, as if they were nothing more than low skilled labor only suitable for menial tasks".

The plight of the so called elves subsequently attracted the attention of minority groups, who noted that no ethnic minority elves were employed by Claus. Sam Atkins, an attorney who investigates cases of racism in the work place noted "Not one dark skinned worker, not one oriental worker, not one from the Indian sub-continent? It is obvious that Claus is a racist - his record of employing minorities is shameful."

Many elves also complained that they were suffering from the affects of second hand smoke, claiming that Mr. Claus would often "sit on a big chair, just puffing on a pipe, blowing smoke across the workshop, oblivious to those around him and the damage his smoking was doing to those under his employ."

Problems with conditions at the North Pole did not just involve the work force; investigators also discovered several reindeer locked in a stable.

After investigation it was revealed that the poor animals were only exercised once a year, spending the remaining 364 days tethered to each other in "abhorrent" conditions, resulting in one animal suffering abrasions to his nose, resulting in an open wound that attending vets called "sickening - the blood filled nostril's developing into an unsightly boil that could be seen ing that all important communication system whether it be transatlantic, or trans-campus. All we need to complete this is a large supply of sombreros, orphan socks and erasers.

Everyone knows that sombreros are worn by some of the less desirable segments of society (at least in every western I've seen the bad guy is wearing one). Once we brainwas. . . . err, recruit our loyal henchmen (they could even be hamsters, but not hipsters, they can't accomplish anything aside from sarcasm) and outfit them with the standard sombrero, we now have a reliable way of identifying people in our power structure that are willing to be the couriers of our plans for global domination.

Now we just need to get the messages across the ocean. To quote the English, "Its a piece of piss," we already have a readily available supply of socks (and believe me if you have even 1/10th of the socks ever orphaned in the world, then you are more than set) and erasers. From here all we need to do is vulcanize the socks with the rubber erasers creating a waterproof tube then cut off the toes of the socks, stitch them together and repeat til you hit Europe, Asia, or Australia. Now all we need is to take our highly trained hamsters and send them through the tube to the waiting sombrero'ed henchmen waiting at the other end. 🐹 from miles away, such was the glow."

The animal was subsequently euthanised.

Claus has vowed he will not be deterred by the closure of his business and claims he will merely relocate to another part of the world where he can operate unimpeded by regulations and political correctness.

"I am outsourcing to China - fuck this shit" he said after hurriedly pushing through a throng of waiting reporters. 🐹
