Freshman Disappointed Winter Carnival Not Actual Carnival

by Chase Peterson ~ Daily Bull

Freshman Johans Terwilliger was devastated this morning when he woke up to find that the ever-famous Michigan Tech Winter Carnival was not a carnival. The eighteen year old Florida transplant said that his RA explained to him at the start of the semester that Winter Carnival was a magic time here at MTU when they would have all of the environmental engineers use their superpowers to melt all the snow on campus and set up large circus tents, food vendors and games of "skill."

Terwilliger reportedly did not get the joke and believed (with the naïve optimism that could only come from someone who has lived in Florida their entire life) that the often overlooked environmental engineers would save him and provide a reprieve (however brief) from the continuous snowfall that has graced the Houghton/Hancock area for the past 6 weeks.

"I can't believe they would play such a mean trick on me," Terwilliger stated. "I mean, when they first told me that the average snowfall up here is 250 inches, I laughed and thought that was the joke, I mean, why would anyone in their right mind ever live or go to school where there is so much snow?"

The RA in charge of babysitting Terwilliger didn't know that the freshman took the joke seriously until he overheard Terwilliger talking with his parents and convincing them to come up to witness the "miracle of science," as he put it, and to enjoy the elephants, deep fried food on a stick, and various games. The parents of the clueless freshman arrived last night and, when asked for a statement, the father replied with a gruff, "Huh, they better get those engineers working on making this white shit disappear, there's so goddamn much it's starting to grow out of the ground in weird blocky shapes." When told the truth about the situation, both parents quickly asked where they could procure long pants, thermal underwear, flannel shirts, and large brown coats, as they had only brought shorts and sarongs, planning on spending as much time as possible at the beach.

"It all got out of hand so fast," the RA told the Daily Bull. "I mean one minute, I think I'm pulling a fast one on a freshman, and the next thing I know I need to explain to his parents how the lake effect works." The RA in question was called in for "disciplinary action," which reportedly involved numerous high-fives, handshakes and even a glass of celebratory champagne.

You mean this ISN'T a carnival?
