Man Wonders Where Scandals Have Gone

by Alex Dinsmoor ~ Great Leader

TOLEDO - After years of scandal after scandal, a local man has wondered what happened to the scandals he knew and loved. "It seems that for the longest time that I could turn on any news channel and be appalled over what I was seeing. Politician sex scandals, financial scandals, everything. What happened to it all?"

Even media professionals have noticed the profound lack of scandals coming from all fronts. "It's getting harder and harder to write jokes," Jon Stewart stated, "I can no longer make fun of politicians with multiple mistresses or celebrities doing illegal activities. It's hurting not only our show, but many other "news" sources across the country."

Sources have reported that CNN has begun actually reporting on news stories that actually impact individuals and not just fluff stories. Anchors at the network have begun complaining that their jobs are becoming "less fun" now that they can't talk about Anthony "Carlos Danger" Wiener's wiener every day.

Murmurs from various sources online state that that there may in fact be groups forming whose purpose is to fabricate scandals for the enjoyment of the population. "Everyone loves a good scandal," one anonymous commenter posted, "so it just makes sense to provide the population with them when those we elect into office cannot fulfill our needs." In the same thread, the commenter later on calls for a "porn featuring a sitting senator" to spice up the scandal scene.

New Bill To Ban Masturbation While Driving

by Elise Conley ~ Komandarm

WASHINGTON - The habits of thousands of American drivers could be changing as early as next year if paperwork filed by Sen. Nathaniel Ableton (R-NH) can gain traction in the Senate. The proposed bill would ban two-handed masturbation while behind the wheel.

"You need at least one hand to operate a motor vehicle," Ableton told the Washington Post. "And if you can't take care of the rest of your business with just one hand, then perhaps you shouldn't be driving."

While Ableton's proposal would ban only two-handed masturbation, others say they would like to see an outright ban on self-pleasement while in the driver's seat. As such, some lawmakers fear the bill could wither and die before it ever sees the light of day.

"One hand or two, jacking off while driving is dangerous," said Sen. Arthur Maximillian (D-MT). "It takes someone's attention away from the road for those precious seconds when the feeling of elation rushes through your loins."

"And if you aren't paying attention, the results can be devastating," said Maximillian. "And messy."

Many states have laws that ban negligent driving, which technically covers any driving behavior that could endanger other people or property. How-

Representatives from the Democratic and Republican leaderships oppose public opinion by commending elected individuals for their “clean slates” over the past few months. “It’s always great to see our leaders living clean and healthy lifestyles,” House majority leader John Boehner (R-OH) stated, “having a positive life balance has always been something that Republicans and Democrats will always agree on.”

TMZ reporters have been working non-stop to dig up any and all dirt possible on anyone they can find, but it seems that asides from rampant twerking, everyone has been for the most part clean. “We know they’re hiding something,” a TMZ reporter told The Bull, “but they’re hiding it pretty damn well.”

ever, the legislature has been hesitant in the past to put specific restrictions on any sexual activity conducted within the confines of a vehicle during operation.

“Listen, our lawmakers are quite cognizant of the hypocritical factor,” said one senator’s aide who spoke to The Daily Bull on the condition of anonymity.

“So as this bill gains public momentum, I think you’re going to find more and more Congressman moving out of their vehicles and into public restrooms.

“Really, it’s just smart politics,” the aide added.

A similar measure making its way through the House of Representatives seeks a total ban on such sexual practices for teenage drivers, easing back to one hand at age 21 and totally removing any restriction by age 25.
