Aquaman Removed From Justice League

by Elise Conley ~ Communications Engineer

CASPIAN SEA – IN the wake of public criticism regarding his powers and severe allegations of superhero inadequacy, Aquaman's membership in the Justice League of America has been revoked. According to the JLA press release, this move is effective immediately.

"Due to the obvious lack of violent crime that actually takes place under the sea, we feel that it is necessary at this time to release Aquaman from his duties," said JLA spokesman the Green Lantern during a press conference at the Hall of Justice. "Seriously, though, he was seriously weighing us down," Green Lantern continued.

According to sources inside the JLA, bad feelings towards Aquaman had been building among the Superfriends for a number of years. Things really came to a head this summer, however, when a New York Times reporter spotted an incredibly intoxicated Plastic Man ranting loudly outside the Tigerlily nightclub in Manhattan.

"What does he ever do for us? Nothing. Not a single goddam thing!" slurred Plastic Man to a crowd of stunned onlookers. "Then when we actually need him it's the same bullshit every time—he gets himself caught in a fishing net and has to use the rings coming out of his fucking head to summon a sawfish to cut him out."

"And then he's all, 'Oh, sorry, looks like I missed out on the action again, guys.' Well, I got some action for you right here." At that juncture, Plastic Man reportedly used his super-elasticity to make a gesture that was deemed vastly inappropriate. "Aquaman? Yeah, he's basically useless," Captain Marvel agreed. "I mean, we can really be kicking some supervillain ass and then you've got fish-boy over there swimming around, hoping no one falls in the water—God forbid he actually have to fight somebody for once."

Family Forced to Spend Time Together During Government Shutdown

by Anony-whaaat? ~ Daily Bull

The Petersons of Amarillo, TX, experienced the true impacts of the government shutdown on Wednesday while on vacation out west. The family of five had planned to be at Yellowstone that morning, but found the gates closed and no one allowed in to see the natural beauty within.

"It was just awful," explained mother Janet Peterson breathlessly. "Here we had come all the way to Yellowstone in order to collectively ogle mountains, hiking trails, and other stuff." The Petersons reported that they like to point out something cool, have the others agree or say "Ohhhh, yeah, I didn't notice that!" and then move on.

With the parks closed, however, all five Petersons were forced to change their plans to swimming in the pool for a while, struggling to make up dinner conversation (and checking their phones in between), and even resorting to playing a board game. The youngest, 11 year old Hunter, said it was just about torture. "I won, but no one really noticed. I think we were all dreaming about taking pictures of buffalo on our own phones and texting them to our friends. It was just weird having to be with my family while we were on vacation, you know?" ☺

"It was the best of thymes, it was the worst of thymes, it was the sage of wisdom, it was the sage of foolishness, it was the cinnamon of belief, it was the cinnamon of incredulity, it was the seasoning of Light, it was the seasoning of Darkness, it was the sugar of hope, it was the wintergreen of despair, we had allspice before us, we had nutmeg before us, we were all going direct to cumin, we were all going direct the parsley way."

In an exclusive interview, Aquaman was fairly candid about the layoff, ascribing it to corporate politics.

"You've got dozens and dozens of Superfriends patrolling the land and sky, but for the 70% of the Earth's surface that's covered by water, there's only me. Do you know how much pressure that is? You just wait until there's, like, a really bad jellyfish thing, or some sort of mutant coral reef that wants to take over the world. Good luck dealing with that without me. I mean, who's going to come to the rescue then? Gleek the Monkey? I don't think so."

"You know what?" added Aquaman, "I'll see you all in hell." ☺

Bull Writer "Proves" He Has Girlfriend

by Chase "May-have-gotten-some-over-the-weekend" Peterson ~ Daily Bull

In a move that has shocked the entire Bull Staff, one writer completely failed to produce anything over the weekend even after going through 3 times his rations in booze. "What can I say?" the writer explained to the Editor-In-Chief "I was just sitting down to drink and write on Sunday, just like I always do and I heard someone slipping their key into my lock" he said "At first I was all like, whoa man, that's not cool, the landlord can't just jam his key into my lock without telling me about it first, this is like a total invasion of my keyhole!" he continued.

It wasn't until after the key was fully in the door and the mystery person through the door that the writer realized it was, in fact, his girlfriend from Canada who came up to surprise him for a couple days. "I couldn't believe it, I mean, I wasn't going to see her until I went to Canada for American Thanksgiving!"

Sources close to the writer say that he was locked in his apartment for three days, forsaking his study group and only opening the door for the pizza delivery guy (we have no clue why his friends were watching him that closely). When asked why they were stalking their friend they responded "It's just because we don't believe him, I mean, have you seen this guy? He barely has any hair, and he is always trying to crack jokes that just suck" his friends related, "this whole thing just smacks of too much effort"

When the writer in question was confronted with this information he just smiled and attempted to make a bad pun, which failed horribly to do anything but warrant a groan from all involved. ☺
