iPhone 5S Has More Features Than We Ever Thought!

by Anony-whaaat? ~ That Annoying Kid in Your Hall

As the hubbub over the newly-announced iPhone 5S slowly fades, and the silver- or gold-plated uberphone flies into the pockets of millions worldwide, Apple announced today that the new iPhone has even more features than advertised!

"After you fingerprint-scan into your iPhone 5S, you'll find that if you press the ergonomic up button, the sleek hold button, and the beautifully simplistic home button, the sides of the phone will unfold and pop up into a fully-functional microwave!" exclaimed CEO Timothy Cook. The microwave is small, but sufficient to heat up to six Totinos Pizza Rolls, a Lean Pocket, or 25 kernels of popcorn. "Perfect for the hungry, on-the-go modern person," enthused Cook.

The second phenomenal new feature to burst, Alien-style, from the new iThing is a semi-durable car jack. During a press conference, CEO Cook explained that the vibration feature in the 5S is so strong that the phone can be wedged beneath a car tire, set to continuously vibrate (by "simply" pressing the home button four times, volume down three times, and asking Siri nicely), and used to "hop" the car off the ground. "This gives the user just enough time to wedge something else under the car's frame and get that flat changed in a jiffy!"

For the less road- or kitchen-savvy, Cook concluded, there's always the tanning lamp function. "At the far end of our already incredible brightness range,

Students Confused Over Mentioning of "Homecoming"

by "Oh Nos Batman" ~ Daily Bull Guest Writer

Happy Career Fair! Because it's so damn early this year, chances are you had to rush your preparations and only skimmed the list of companies. There are some great companies here this year, so here's a list of some that you should check out while waiting for the line at the Kimberly-Clark booth to get shorter (hint: it won't):

Alliance Laundry Systems: Everyone knows that the worst part about living away from home is having to do laundry—it takes time, and it's expensive! But for Alliance Laundry Systems employees, laundry is half the workday. Spend your mornings playing endless games of mud football and paintball, and your afternoons attempting to wash it all. And get paid to do it.

Atomic Object, LLC: Look through that microscope. At that thing! You see it? That thing with that color in that cool shape! Explore the world of cool-looking shit, at the atomic level. You'll see enough cool stuff to make /r/electronmicroscopy swoon.

Epic: This group is legendary. Founded by some guy named Homer, this is one of the only companies besides Michigan Tech Grad School and the US Army recruiters to accept applications from English majors (they do exist!). Past interns have spun tales of their adventures there, some almost too ridiculous to believe.

Harmon, Inc: Dan Harmon, creator of NBC's Community, has created his own company targeted at hiring engineers. This season's paintball episode is rumored to be more intense than ever before, this time featuring massive structural obstacles made from... cardboard. If you built a cardboard boat that somehow didn't sink during homecoming, this may be the place for you.

Loadmaster Corporation: For those who feel they can do a good job of controlling large loads. Must be 18 years of age or older to apply. Socks provided.

Mercury Marine: Now that old mercury thermometers are essen-

So AMAZE-ing!

Life is like a box of crayons. Most people are the 8-color boxes, but what you're really looking for are the 64-color boxers with the sharpeners in the back. I fancy myself to be a 64-color box, though I've got a few missing.

there's an unlockable feature to go beyond max brightness," he explained, "and it's so simple. Like all of our products, the new iTan is easily accessible. Simply slide the brightness all the way up to max, curl yourself into a full side-crane yoga pose, and breathe gently over the screen." Supposedly, if all steps are completed correctly, you can then wave the phone over any part of your body to tan up in minutes!

Devout Apple users are heralding these additional features as "revolutionary," "extraordinary," "luminary," "incredible," "amazing," "unrivaled," and "simply genius." Everyone else is content with being able to use resizable widgets on their homescreen.

tially useless, all of that mercury has to go somewhere. With facilities located along both coasts, Mercury Marine serves to explore the opportunities available in this up-and-coming field. Employment with this company is known to the State of California to cause several severe-sounding illnesses.

Procter & Gamble: For whatever reason, standardized testing is still a popular way of measuring intelligence. Teachers have gotten sick of this shit and will no longer sit around while students take the exams. Enter Procter & Gamble: employees proctor exams during the day and are given the run of the local casinos by night. Pay is variable and based entirely off of how good your poker face is.

Progressive: They've got a solid handle on insurance policies and all, but they're really looking for progressive thinkers to come up with a replacement for Flo once she retires.

Letter From The Editor!

by Alex Dinsmoor~ Daily Bull Editor in Chief

So I'm sure a number of you have noticed that you haven't been getting The Bull in your email this year and if you haven't... Well you should probably be a bit more attentive! Anyways, we here at The Bull have been painfully aware of the situation since the beginning of year and due to an unfortunate series of events regarding our office change this summer, we are left internet-less in our office. Without internet, we can't easily publish our issues online and to you daily in your email.

At first, we as a paper decided to wait for IT to provide our office internet, as they gave us a reasonable window of time in which it would be working in. Well, as you all have all noticed by now, we still don't have internet and a working office.

With all of that background behind us, I would like to apologize that we did not email The Bull out to the masses sooner and from now on, we will strive to get that email out to you daily as early as possible. We can't have a paper without you readers, so I'd like to thank you for sticking with us for this past month!

Thank you for your readership,
Alex Dinsmoor
Editor In Chief
