Student Goes Grocery Shopping, Accidentally Buys More Alcohol Than Food

by Alex Dinsmoor ~ Editor in Chief

A Econofoods cashier has reported that late Monday, a student managed to spend more than three times on alcohol than on their weekly groceries. The student, who is to remain nameless to protect their identity, went in to Econo with a full grocery list full of items, but somehow managed to fill a cart with different liquors and ales. "At first, I thought she was buying for a party," the cashier said, "but when I joked with her and asked if she was holding a party, she replied with "nope, just my weekly groceries!" I then became extremely concerned for her well being and decided to contact the authorities."

Other patrons who were shopping along side the shopper, called her "obsessive", noting that she went into the alcohol section of the store and seemed to "grab anything and everything" until her cart was full. "At first it was normal," one patron told The Bull, "but then she threw a six pack of Bells IPA into her cart and actually broke a carton of eggs in the bottom of her cart! And this was AFTER she squished her loaf of bread!" One fellow shopper had apparently offered to get her a second cart, as her cart was overflowing with goods, but she turned them down, citing "it's not that much!"

"I didn't realize how much I was buying at the time," the student told The Bull, "at first I thought I was just getting some drinks for the house, but when I went to check out and the total topped $400, I realized I may have a problem." It became clear to the student that this wasn't their normal take, when Econo presented her with a 'golden MORE card'. "Although I may have blown through three weeks pay, I can at least guarantee that this weekend will be awesome!" 🍷
