Guy Starves to Death Trying to Find His Car in Lot 21

by Anony-whaaat? ~ Staff Writer

A sophomore Chemical Engineering student perished Saturday evening after returning to Tech from the winter holidays. The undisclosed Grand Rapids native was dropped off by a friend in Lot 21 to pick up his car, which had been parked there over break. However, due to the mind-bending amount of snow Houghton accumulated in December, he was unable to discern his vehicle from the 150 other snowdrifts.

A forensic team followed the deceased's tracks "hither and yon," piecing together the student's journey. "It looks like he started out purposefully," said Dan Bennett, "but the first car he dug into wasn't his." According to Bennett, the guy burrowed into every drift in a 5-drift radius, finding nothing but Minnesota and Wisconsin plates. At that point, desperation must have started in. Footprints in the snow led to every car-drift-blob, systematically up and down every row.

Frantic shovel-piles surrounded nearly every vehicle on campus as he tried to excavate each and every car from two feet of drift. It soon became dark, then morning, then day, then dark, then morning, until eventually the fellow tried to eat his shovel. A toothbite-laden handle was found near his body, smack in the middle of the parking lot.

Grieving friends reported that he actually left his car at his girlfriend's house in Hancock, but went up to 21 out of habit. "I guess... I guess he forgot logic right after finals, just like he forgot everything he learned last semester," snuffled said girlfriend.

Tech's Campus Confused for Hoth

by Chase 'Cupcake' Petersen ~ Pastry Correspondent

Students were stunned this morning when the Millennium Falcon landed in the Rozsa parking lot looking like some piece of intergalactic space trash that had just barely gotten out of some tight scraps. After about an hour of odd banging noises coming from the ship the door reluctantly opened and three bedraggled forms emerged from the ship and began to take stock of where they were. Sophomore Jonas Terwilliger was there when the ship landed and described it as "the coolest moment of my life". He went on to talk about the technical specifications of the ship which this reporter quickly lost interest in because he had most of his facts completely wrong.

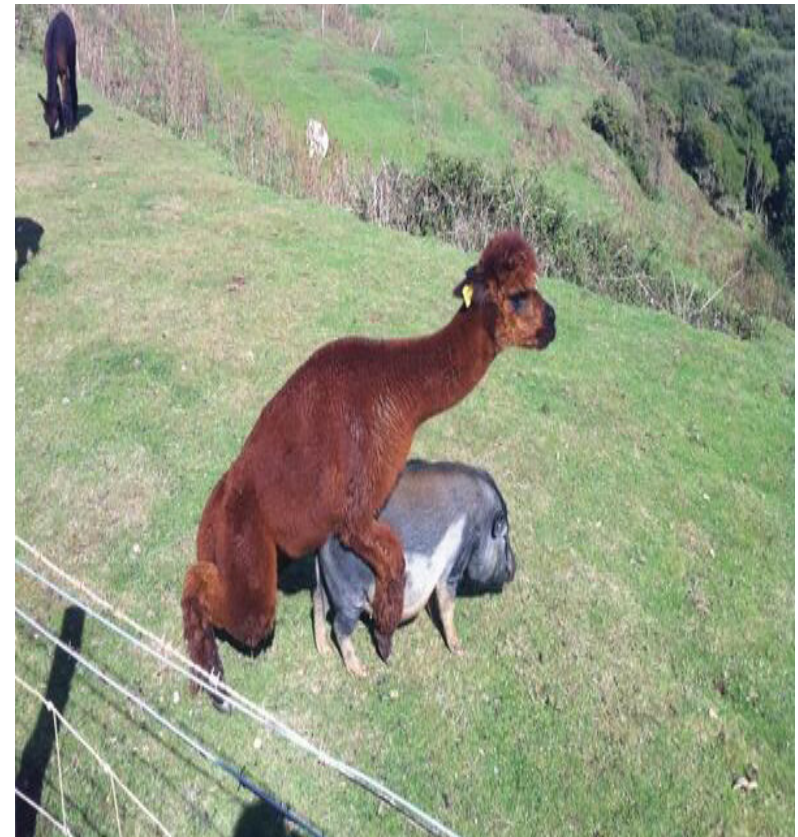

The three crewmembers of the ship identified themselves as Luke Skywalker, Han Solo and Chewbacca. Han and Luke both demanded to be taken to the rebel base and given an audience with Princess Leia. Chewbacca, on the other hand took one look around and loudly exclaimed "huuguughghg wrrhw huuguughghg raaaaaahghg aaaaahr huuguughghg uughghhgh aarrragghuuhw uuh huurh aarragghuuhw", which loosely translates to "where the **** am I?! Solo you're such a grub-hrubbing nerfherder"

When asked why they thought they had landed on the ice planet Hoth they pointed to the current snow fall and their instrument panel stating "How could we be anywhere else? Nobody in their right mind would live here by choice, unless they were trying to overthrow the Galactic Empire. Besides we picked up the footprint of the shield generators and defense perimeter from all the others, Public Safety has started a Personal Crest campaign. Every student who wishes to do so may pick up a blank flag mounted on an eight-foot pole from the Public Safety offices. On it, says Officer Bennett, you are welcome to create your own personal symbol, crest, or design.

"Then, all you've got to do is plant it in the snow right next to your car when you're leaving it for a long time," said Bennett.

In addition to the tragic downfall of a Chem Eng for reasons unrelated to UO lab, local car dealerships and tow companies are reporting massive spikes in revenue now that everyone's back. One shop in Hancock summarized: "Dead batteries, frozen transmissions, alternators giving up... it's like second Christmas!"

when we were a little over a light year out". When the three learned that what they had picked up was really a snow sculpture created for the winter carnival last year they looked annoyed and impressed and insisted in searching the area for themselves. After the three living legends of every nerd's childhood scoured the entire Michigan Technological University's campus they came to the conclusion that this was not Hoth, however it was a reasonable substitute.

"I couldn't believe my eyes" one third year electrical engineer exclaimed "One minute I'm driving to school in near white out conditions and the next moment I'm swerving to avoid the Millennium-freaking-Falcon" they continued "I mean I know I went into the car in front of me and now both cars are totaled, but who cares? It's THE Falcon, possibly the only good part about parts 1, 2 and 3 of the series". When asked about the car accident they responded "I would have crashed 10 cars just to see this thing in real life", when they saw the three inhabitants of the ship they promptly defecated themselves and passed out.

"Well, we really need to get going" they said, "But can you start making a shield generator and laser guns?" When they learned of the current woes of the students regarding the IT department and the new scheduling changes that were forthcoming they responded "it looks like the Galactic Empire has already taken hold here, we will be back to liberate you"
