New Research! Loud Pipes = Small Penis!

Douli

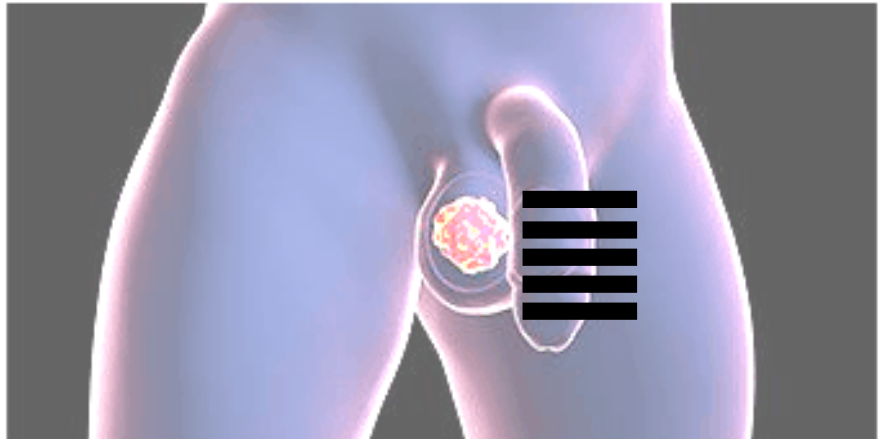

Gets a small car

We asked several non-biased adults why men who make their car engines really loud. Some answered at Haesindang Park (Korea's Penis Park) by suggesting that these men are "compensating for something." After thorough reddit search, looking for men with load engines to interview, one playful user replied, "you should try r/micropenis". Another user stated, "You can hear them coming from miles away; motorcycles, trucks and cars with modified exhaust systems customized to rattle the thoughts out of your head."

Researchers from Michigan State University released their results on Friday which showed a direct positive relationship between the size of a man's penis to the sound decibels produced from their mufflers.

Dr. Dickard explained the studies methodology and the findings: "We set up in a large parking lot and measured the sound levels. When the sound levels was louder than average, we identified the driver and had two of our researchers approach them in a seductive way. We have the researchers follow the same script: 'Your pipe really turns me on, what's your specs?' Generally speaking, the drivers would whip one out on the spot and before they could figure it out, we would have gotten him tagged and measured." "We heavily relied on the Dukes of Hazzard to get some feasible data." In the 1980s, the Dukes of Hazzard was documented and was the first research to demonstrate a low IQ amongst muscle car fans. The producers then moved onto researching groups like NASCAR and monster truck enthusiasts.

"At the beginning of our study, we were having a difficult time obtaining subjects. We were using mainly female researchers," Dr. Dickard explains. "I had a hunch about the unspoken rule between men." I applied the "Bros before Hoes" Rule to our research study and our turnout increased dramatically. It turns out these men chose to expose themselves to other men than a woman. I guess the slang from 2001 really speaks the truth. The unwritten law or the trump card that bros (males) should always come before hoes (females).

The research published last week builds on decades of previous similar studies measuring penis size. We then reached out to the President at Ford, Jim D. Farley Jr. He stated, "the entire F150, F250, F350 marketing was directed to get men with smaller penises to buy larger trucks. If you park these trucks side by side arranged from smallest to largest and measured penis length, the relationship is close to 99%."

The other big two has also started researching this revolutionary relationship.

Although there has been many controversies, decades of research, engine revvers still continue to deny their small penis sizes, claiming "Mine is larger." The next time you are stopped at a red light and the car behind you starts revving the throttle, just remember that he's just compensating for being cheated by his god with an extremely funny sense of humor.

Small penis? Have I got a car for you.

If you're going to overcompensate, then by all means, overcompensate.
