Pink Pearl Forgotten About at Career Fair

Copulation Cream

Despite the absolute Koubek-load of employers at Career Fair, all super eager to have canned conversations over your typo-riddled resumés, there was one company that was remarkably not approached by a single student: Pink Pearl Software Solutions. Per their website, Pink Pearl is comprised of a modest software team that uses the Waterfall technique to develop small projects like website and database systems. They frequently shift to an XP-Waterfall hybrid style -- called Extreme Waterfall -- when there is a lot of friction in the workplace and problems need to be worked out quickly. Their office is located off Exit 69 on Big Beaver Road in Birmingham, MI. We contacted Pink Pearl recruiter Clint Horace for comment on the lack of engagement.

"We were definitely sad that no students approached our table, but given the circumstances, it is understandable. MTU College of Computing students rarely go out in public, and when they do, they are intimidated by long lines and large crowds. Career Fair was rough in that aspect. It's such a shame; we have tons Pink Pearl branded vibrating pens, breath mints, and nail clippers that we weren't able to distribute to any students." Horace said.

The Daily Bull also interviewed Software Engineering Senior and veteran Career Fair attendee Vern Gentles for comments on the Pink Pearl situation. When asked if Gentles was interested in networking with Pink Pearl, he responded: "Uhhh, who? Pink Pearl? No, I don't think I've ever heard of them. Look, I'm a Career Fair expert. I've been doing this for years, even when it was online. I talked to tons of software companies that were there, and there was definitely no Pink Pearl. If I'm wrong, they must have been in the Wood Gym. What does Pink Pearl even do? They must not be a big company if they weren't in the main Multipurpose Gym."

Pink Pearl was indeed in the Wood Gym, specifically at table O4, which was at the far end from the entrance. One could have found them next to the Virginia Canoe Company, which saw a great deal of traffic, making the absence of any engagement towards Pink Pearl that much more of a mystery.

Horace continued in his interview, saying, "We aren't sure if we can afford to make an appearance at Career Fair next year. We had to shave down a lot of our project area and resources for the week to make this trip economical, and for what? Not a single student came down to our table. Much as we'd like to give it another try, perhaps another university would have some more students that went down on us -- excuse me, were down with us."

This all begs the question: Will the Pink Pearl table come back next year? And if so, will any Computer Science students find it?
