MAJOR RECALL: The Daily Bull Branded Condoms

Big Sephiroth

The Daily Bull's special branded condoms, given out last Friday at O-Week's A Taste Of Tech's Traditions, have been recalled following the discovery of multiple health code violations. After passing out over 50 condoms at the event, an examination after the fact (that definitely did NOT include blowing them up like balloons and whacking random people on the street - you cannot prove we did that, you saw nothing, you heard nothing, shut up, I won't say anything else without my lawyer present) showed that the latex was much thinner than the regulated standards. We have concluded that this could be a major threat to the condom's structural integrity, putting them at risk of tearing during balloon sword fights-intimate activities, and as staunch advocates for safe sex, The Daily Bull could not stand for this. And also the poison. The condoms were laced with an extremely potent poison that can be absorbed into the skin at extremely fast rates. Also it would kill you instantly. And very painfully. Which - I know with it being the first week of class and all - may seem tempting, but please do not because it would be a PR nightmare for us. Oh, also we poked holes in all of them. Sorry about that.

Luckily, none of the condoms were used because Tech students never get laid anyways. All defective items have been secretly swapped out with normal ones when you weren't looking. Well, except for one, but we won't tell you whose!
