Conservative Mathematicians Upset Over [REDACTED]'s Acronym (kP)* "Not an Accurate Population Model"

Hazel Sprotitsy, "Get Gorked" Guy

In a recent statement released by Conservative Undergraduate Mathematicians (CUM), it was concluded that [REDACTED] was not a valid representation of the MTU student body nor any population due to their acronym representing unbounded growth. In their statement, they explained that in order to be even a remotely accurate population model, they would at least have to follow the model $kP(M-P)$. [REDACTED] has since responded to the allegations with a mathematical proof of their own defending themselves as shown below:

Proof:

- 1.) $kP(M-P)$ // Given
- 2.) Let $K = -k$
- 3.) $KP(P-M)$ // Plug K into (1)
- 4.) Let $C = 1$
- 5.) Let $U = 1$
- 6.) $CUKP(CUP-CUM)$ // $C*U*(1) -$
Identity cuz $C = U = C*U = 1$
- 7.) $KP(P-CUM)$ // Identify on
CUKP and CUP terms
- 8.) $KP(P-0)$ // CUM doesn't mean shit- they can go fuck themselves
- 9.) $KP(P)$ // $X-0 = X$ for all
 X -whatever that law's called
- 10.) KP^2 // Conclusion

"As you can see, what the math has really shown here is that we need to take our pride to the next power - which, actually, we can totally get behind. As such, would like the thank the Conservative Undergraduate Mathematicians for their suggestion, and we will be presenting these mathematical findings at our next budget hearing in hopes of squaring our budget"

- [REDACTED, spokesperson for [REDACTED]]

*Disclaimer: Obviously, KP is the acronym for Keewenaw Pride, but they didn't actually say any of the shit in this article, so it wouldn't really be fair to use their name like that...

New Lead Suggests Students Poked, Prodded, and Harvested at Harold Meese Center

Dr. U. Kill

[HOUGHTON] Many students at Michigan Technological Institute have recently reported feeling uneasy around the Harold Meese Center for Cognitive and Learning Sciences. Not only is this surprising given how few students even know where the building is, but also due to the alarms uptick in "feelings of doom" around campus. Our investigative reporters have been looking into these feelings as well as searching for leads.

Our first brave reporter (may they be remembered as a pure and honest soul) volunteered to go to the belly of the beast, by tracking a student registered in Intro to Psychology. This student was going to take part in a study for credit in their class. Our reporter (once again, rest in peace) took this student out and took their place and what they found in the Meese Center will shock you. As they went in, they were told to "put all of their personal belongings in this ash stained metal tray." Soon after, the experimentation started. Our poor reporter was poked with sticks, prodded with poles, rubbed with wipes, and even patted on the head and called a "good noodle." Clearly, there is something very disturbing about this place.

Unfortunately, this is where our trail goes cold. We never got any further correspondence from our reporter. Everything we know at the moment came from our reporter's secret tooth recorder that sends all of its recordings to the cloud. After hearing our poor report get called a 'good noodle,' we hear a researcher say "now to get the harvest." Truly petrifying.

If you have any information about the Harold Meese Center, please reach out to us bull@mtu.edu, but beware dear reader, do not approach the building for your own safety, leave it to the professionals. And if you know anybody taken into the Meese like our reporter (#neverForget), there will be a ceremony for remember all those taken from us to early by the evils of research
