Hell opens new location in Keweenaw Peninsula

Blitzzy Business

This past Tuesday, the CEO of Hell Inc. announced new plans regarding extending the well-known torture service into the human realm. This new business venture seeks to extend service to the students of MTU and surrounding communities. Hell Inc's CEO, Say Tan, assures stockholders that this business venture is unlike any Hell product previously seen. Tan elaborated on this during Hell Inc.'s latest press conference.

"You know that saying 'when Hell freezes over'? Well, we aim to finally make it a reality!" Say Tan then unveiled a satellite image of the Keweenaw Peninsula with some cyan and purple crayon scribbled onto it. "As you can see here, we are bringing a new freezing torture method to the puny Human Realm. Ice rains to cover their sidewalks, hail to slice their skin, snow that is too rough to make a snowman with but too soft and wet to easily shovel, we have MANY ideas in development!"

Mr. Tan claims he has spent time touring the Keweenaw Peninsula before making this major decision. When asked about his favorite activities, he said he thoroughly enjoyed skiing on Ripley and browsing on YikYak. He claims he expects around 45% of customers to be sourced from YikYak. MTU students can expect freezing rain and winter mixes periodically throughout April as Hell Inc. tests their new torture technology and reception.

MTU students have had quite a bit to say regarding this sudden change. We asked a few students for their thoughts.

Cooper Cantrip says, "I think this might be a good change. It's been coming for a while, lets be honest. After the shitshow of this year? I'm surprised this hasn't happened sooner!" While some students aren't surprised at all, some students have expressed their concerns.

Joshua Jamboree had this to say: "I think this is BULLSHIT. I have done NOTHING wrong. Why should I have to suffer? I've only harassed A FEW people. A FEW! How is THAT worth being pelted with snow and ice? Ridiculous."

Regardless of student opinion, this business venture is sure to stimulate the local economy and promote small businesses. Say Tan has pledged to donate 25% of profits to local charities, and with every tortured soul, Hell Inc. will plant one tree in our local forests!
