U.S To End PATRIOT Act; Get Cheaper Spies from China

Reporting by Chris Coons (No Relation)

February 29, 2023, The United States will sunset the groundbreaking legislation that has given power to the NSA and other federal agencies for 22 years. The act, Uniting and Strengthening America by Providing Appropriate Tools Required to Intercept and Obstruct Terrorism (USA PATRIOT), signed by President George Bush in the aftermath of the 9/11 terrorist attacks, has held strong through four presidents and billions of text messages from the American people. The decision comes after intense negotiations with China after several surveillance aircraft were intercepted in American airspace. Starting February 29, the U.S will actually cede all surveillance efforts to China.

"It's simply cheaper," says Alaskan Senator Lisa Murkowski. "I was freaked out about these balloons at first, I mean they are a huge national security threat, but then I realized that I'm a Republican! The GOP is literally only concerned with balancing the budget and reducing the deficit of the largest economy in the world, no matter the implications. China simply provides all of our surveillance needs for a much cheaper price. Their little balloons are so quaint! Look here! I did the math in my pocketbook!"

After being forced to look at doodles of Steven Universe smut in the margins of the senator's pocketbook, The Daily Bull gathered information on exactly what costs incurred by the American people will be cut by switching surveillance providers. In fact, it only took us about 15 minutes to see some significant change in the numbers. China! 15 minutes can save you 15% or more on surveillance.

Starting February 29, 2023, the NSA will cede all access to cell networks, Internet servers, and internal documents to China. China will personally see to the privacy violations of millions of Muslim people living in the United States, where they will maintain our comprehensive no-fly list and add even more children to it.

China also plans to establish firm points of contact with every metropolitan police station in the U.S. There are millions of brown, poor, queer, disabled, homeless, or otherwise marginalized people living in America. Thanks to this new deal, China has graciously agreed to absorb the costs of maintaining this militia known as the police that is responsible for beating, brutalizing, and killing hundreds of people each year.

Craig Thomas, a Black man who grew up in New York City, said in a comment concerning the imminent Chinese surveillance takeover, "This literally changes nothing about my day to day life. Do you know what a stop and frisk is? I don't care about a fucking surveillance balloon. China can spy on me all they want; it won't get any worse than millions of us have had it in this country for hundreds of years."

Wow. Very poignant, Craig. You would think that such a rebuke of American policy, articulated so well and without nuance, would instead be found somewhere like a manufactured piece of political satire. You would think. Anyways, thanks for reading. I'm Chris Coons, signing off.
