New Lots to Open Amidst Parking Shortage

Big Sephiroth

Since the beginning of the semester, concerns over parking on campus have been rampant as enrollment increases. Earlier this summer, Transportation Services announced that they will be changing parking regulations, adding a new type of parking called guaranteed commuter which, for a definitely very fair price increase of $200, you can park in the same places that regular commuters could last year! This was meant to allow select students to find guaranteed parking closer to campus, but considering nobody has ever seen the lot by the Rozsa even half way full, it is evident that other options should be explored.

Currently, administration has revealed that they are working with students to open new lots all around Michigan to make parking a more pleasant experience. These lots will be located in Marquette, Detroit, and Brazil, and will be available to all students with a valid commuter pass for the 2023-2024 school year.

The first lot, 113, will be located just off of Northern Michigan University's campus in Marquette. This lot will have 230 regular commuter parking spots and an extra 15 metered parking spots - of course, able to be paid through the ParkMobile app - available for those without commuter passes. We expect this lot to be surrounded by NMU students carrying pitchforks and torches at most times, as it is technically a part of Tech's campus. Administration advises you don't make eye contact with them and try to move as slowly as possible to avoid drawing attention.

Lot 114, the second one announced in the plan, will be located near Detroit. Admin notes that this lot will be very convenient for students who live downstate who now may be only a 30 minute drive followed by a 193 hr walk to campus! This lot boasts 300 parking spots, which will also be metered until 4 PM, after which you will still be required to have a parking pass. Due to the location, the rate will also be increased by a small amount to $10/hr. Once again, your trusty friend, the ParkMobile app, can be used to pay this fare from anywhere on campus!

Finally, Lot 115 will be opened in a remote forest in Brazil. This lot will have 174 spaces for commuters, and no metered parking (but you can still use the ParkMobile app to pay a random meters' fee if you're feeling left out!). Since this lot is, again, technically a part of Michigan Tech's campus and therefore American soil, you will be required to have a passport in order to enter and leave the lot. Transportation Services is also working on getting a shuttle helicopter to help students get to campus -- tentative prices are $500 one-way for students with a valid ID.
