Missing: Wilbur the Octopus

On the evening of Friday, October 6 — Wilbur, a small, squishy, and often sticky little indigo octopus went missing, reportedly in McNair dining hall as their handler forgot to grab them after trying to figure out whether the brownies were non-vegan/palatable. The squishy little shit was reported missing to the McNair front desk the following morning; they were also reported missing to McNair Dining Hall as soon as they opened Monday morning. Both confirmed that they would notify Wilbur's handler via email if they were found.

It has now been 11 days since the disappearance of Wilbur, and the adorable little fucker has still not been found. It is highly suspected that Chartwells mercilessly disposed of poor Wilbur via trash receptacle over the weekend, mistaking them for a piece of trash or a worthless toy. Little did they know, Wilbur was probably worth at least 50 cents*.

Regardless, the search for Wilbur continues. If you or someone you know sees Wilbur or an approximately-one-inch-tall indigo octopus squishy that you suspect may be Wilbur, please do not hesitate to contact bull@mtu.edu, and we will return Wilbur to their handler (like actually, like /srs actually — please; ~~I am~~ we are begging you).

There is also a small chance that Wilbur was misplaced at a Daily Bull meeting on the evening of October 6, 2023. Despite multiple previous searches, it is humbly requested that everyone attend the next Daily Bull meeting (6pm on the Friday after fall break) to verify the presence of Wilbur or lack thereof in room Fisher 326. Pizza will be provided to all who come as a thank-you for their help (and totally not just because we always have pizza)

*This is just based on some Amazon scrolling, Wilbur was actually rescued from a dentist's office a couple of years ago
